New Dealers For Relief Cut Claim Assent Of President

Both Sides Look Toward Roosevelt on Eve of House Battle.

McReynolds Joins Woodrum in Fight

May Offer Compromise If 500 Million Slash Is Defeated.

By Robert C. Albright.

Challenging reports that the President insists upon $1,500,000,000 for relief, a compact bloc of Democratic stalwarts will strike in the House today for a $500,000,000 "budget-balancing" slash in the 1938 WPA budget.

Serving notice that they will fight every dollar's increase over $1,000,000,000, the economy crusaders, led by two strong Roosevelt supporters, will find themselves opposed by the House leadership and a majority of the House Appropriations Committee.

White House approval will be claimed on both sides of the proposal, as the House opens debate on the relief issue. A compromise proposal for $1,200,000,000 will be tossed into the fight, if the first stand for $1,000,000,000 crumbles.

Flood Bill Pushed.

Tension over the approaching test tightened yesterday, with rebellious outbreaks on both sides of the Administration's economy front.

Chairman William M. Whittington, of the House Flood Control Committee, demanded action immediately on the $800,000,000 flood control program, despite word from the President asking him to hold up his measure.

Chairman Sam D. McReynolds, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, stoically received word of the President's veto of the $5,000,000 New York World's Fair bill, which he marshaled to passage. Then he solemnly announced that if economy was wanted "this House will have a chance, perhaps, to do something about that when the relief bill comes in here tomorrow."

In the House, Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, led a successful fight to restore $2,000,000 lopped off of the Blue Ridge parkway funds by the Appropriation Committee. The highway runs near Doughton's home at Sparta, N. C.

Fechner's Pay Attacked.

In the Senate, Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, moved to cut the salary of Robert Fechner, CCC director, from $12,000 to $10,000, after attacking New Deal broadcasts on legislative questions. A similar cut was approved by the House.

It was following the President's veto of the New York World's Fair bill that Representative McReynolds disclosed he will fight alongside Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, Virginia Democrat, for a $500,000,000 cut in relief funds.

The President raised two objections to the world's fair bill. First, he considered $5,000,000 "excessive" in the light of retrenchment aims. Second, he submitted an Attorney General opinion that power given the proposed world's fair commission to appoint a commissioner to administer the funds was an encroachment on executive prerogatives.

"I am glad to say," McReynolds

Mob Endangers Mother Accused Of Slaying Infant

Jackson, Miss., May 19 (U.P.).—A dry-eyed, gingham-clad young farm mother was brought to the Hinds County jail for safekeeping tonight after she was charged with beating her 3-month-old daughter to death.

District Attorney Homer Currie said the woman, Mrs. Vivian Gregory, admitted whipping the infant at her home near Raleigh in Smith County. She allegedly "punished" the child "to make it behave."

Sheriff J. M. Martin said feeling ran high in the community when the young farmer father and husband called in neighbors and told them the baby was dead. The mother had summoned her husband from the field. Neighbors, according to the sheriff, said Mrs. Gregory frequently had complained that she did not want the baby.

Lindy's Flight In Pictures

The Lindbergh saga, 10 years after, is vividly recalled today in a page of pictures on page 18.

The photo-story of the flight which has remained in its original glory through the years begins with Lindbergh's take-off from Roosevelt Field and follows each thrilling episode that followed to the time he returned to be honored by the late President Coolidge.

Today's pictures recall on its tenth anniversary the flight that stirred the entire world.

Duke to Fight Clique of Foes In British Court

King's Free Will Throttled, He Thinks; Wallis to Be 'Royal Highness.'

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 19.—Close friends of the Duke of Windsor declared tonight he was determined to start a relentless fight against those persons in England whom he accuses of forcing him off his throne and into exile and who, he believes, now are attempting to strangle the free will of his brother, King George VI.

These friends said a statement emanating from the Chateau de Cande today could be considered as a first step in the former King's action against his opponents in England.

A few hours after the last legal obstacles to the Duke's marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield were cleared away, Herman L. Rogers, spokesman for the couple, said the reason no members of the British royal family would come to France to see the Duke married was "probably that the King was advised not to send any one."

This remark, the Duke's friends said, could be considered as coming from Edward himself, although Rogers declared it was his own "personal opinion."

Plans Secret Honeymoon.

Monts, France, May 19 (AP).—American-born Wallis Warfield is assured of becoming the Duchess of Windsor "before noon, June 3," Herman L. Rogers, spokesman for the duke and his fiancee, announced tonight.

Rogers indicated the British government had compromised with former King Edward VIII and granted his future bride a royal style that will make her eighth ranking woman of the British Empire, ahead of all the peeresses of the realm.

The duke had insisted not only that his bride become "H. R. H." but that members of the British royal family attend the wedding at the Chateau de Cande. On the latter point apparently he lost after the government had conceded the former. No members of his family will be present at the simple marriage rites.

Hoosier Lawmaker Would Start U. S. In Film Business

Washington may have a Hollywood, and Government employes may produce a Greta Garbo or a Robert Taylor if a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, becomes a law.

Schulte proposed that an office of motion pictures be established in the Government Printing Office, with authority to produce films within Federal agencies.

A director, who must be a trained motion-picture engineer, is designated as head of the office. The bill allows him three technical assistants and other employes as needed. The director's salary is fixed at $8,000 a year, the salaries of the assistants at $4,800.

Nazis Demand Pope Repudiate Chicago Prelate

Press Attacks Mundelein for Speech on Reich Government.

Berlin, May 19.—Nazi newspapers tonight demanded that the Vatican publicly repudiate Cardinal Mundelein, Archbishop of Chicago, for a "declaration of war" in his condemnation of the German government.

The venerable Chicago Cardinal, in an address before more than 500 members of the Catholic clergy at a diocesan conference in Chicago yesterday, bitterly assailed Chancellor Adolf Hitler's government for "giving out through its crooked minister of propaganda stories of wholesale immorality in religious institutions."

The newspaper Der Angriff, organ of Propaganda Minister Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, said the cardinal's speech "has insulted the entire German nation, including German Catholics."

The newspaper Nachtausgabe, demanding that Pope Pius XI censure the cardinal, said:

"When a cardinal makes statements such as those contained in the Chicago speech he speaks in behalf of the entire church. Thus it follows that Cardinal Mundelein acted on instructions from the Vatican or that he violated his duty by making statements without the Vatican's knowledge.

"In this case, however, the supreme authority of the church owes the German people a public reckoning which can consist only of a repudiation of the Archbishop of Chicago."

Der Angriff, most bitter of all Nazi newspapers in its editorial attacks on foreign personalities, said Cardinal Mundelein "certainly has read reports in the German press and hence is well informed.

"If, nevertheless, he is impertinent enough to talk of atrocity stories and charge that Minister of Propaganda Goebbels asserted that immorality prevailed in all branches of the Catholic Church, then he

Rebel Planes Raze Village; Basques Flee

Aerial Bombs Fall in Suburbs; Britain Warns Shipping to Leave.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, May 19.—Basque defenders of refugee-packed Bilbao retreated from the smoking ruins of Amorebieta today as black insurgent bombers renewed attacks.

Clearing skies enabled the insurgent airmen again to join the offensive toward the last "iron ring" of fortifications about Bilbao.

Insurgent aircraft bombed the village of Munguia, 10 miles northeast of Bilbao, for an hour. Devastation centered about the village church.

The bombers also scouted above Bilbao and dropped projectiles on the city's suburbs while the Spanish liner Habana prepared to sail soon for Southampton, England, with 4,000 children refugees.

British Ships Must Leave.

The British government notified British shipping in Bilbao Harbor to leave as soon as possible, as otherwise, in view of the insurgent advance, it would be impossible to guarantee British naval protection.

The British consul visited two freighters, the Joyce Llewellyn and the Alice Maria, and showed their captains telegrams to that effect signed by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

Rear-guard government troops, hastily erecting barriers across the Amorebieta highway, struggled to prevent the insurgents from cracking the Gallo defense line on which Bilbao has pinned its hope.

The government front was about 8 miles east and slightly south of the capital, while the main body of troops fell back to Galdacano, pivot of the fortification line, only 3 miles from the capital's outskirts.

Within Bilbao, two captured German airmen, Capt. Walter Keinzel and Lieut. Gunther Schulze, were ordered to appear before a popular tribunal for trial tomorrow on charges of murder and rebellion.

Protest Germans' "Crimes."

The semi-autonomous Basque government sent a note to the 27-nation nonintervention committee in London protesting "the Germans' criminal action" in the Basque offensive.

"Mola (insurgent Gen. Emilio Mola) threatens to turn Vizcaya into a cemetery unless Bilbao surrenders," the note stated.

"He adds he has ample means to do it. He seems disposed to put the idea into operation, judging by the successive destructions of Durango, Guernica, Bolivar, Eibar and El Gueta.

"German aviation at the service of the rebels continues action against Munguia, Larrauri, Maruri, Larrabezua and Plencia, dropping a great number of incendiary grenades, and machine-gunning the civilian population which, menaced by death, must flee into the fields, thus causing numerous victims especially women and children," the note declared.

Say Retreat Was Orderly.

Bilbao's defenders described the eastern retreat as an orderly movement dictated by the necessity of strengthening the defenses of Galdacano and other points south of Mount Biscargui, at the same time

St. Bernard Pack Imprisoned After One Mangles Girl

Grenoble, France, May 19 (AP).—Monks of the Mount St. Bernard Monastery imprisoned their famed "rescue" pack of St. Bernard dogs in kennels "as a punishment" tonight because one of them killed a 10-year-old girl skier.

A monk explained it was impossible to "establish the identity of the dog" which attacked the girl because they all looked alike.

The ponderous dog, apparently rushing out with the pack as usual to greet travelers, chewed and mangled Marie-Anne Bremond as she approached the monastery with her father and two sisters, who were powerless to prevent the attack. The girl was taken into the monastery for treatment but died shortly after the assault.

D. C. Adopts Five-Headed Tax Program

Rise on Gas, Insurance Included in Plan to Get $8,600,000.

By James D. Secrest.

A five-point "emergency" tax program was adopted by the District Commissioners yesterday as their final recommendation to Congress.

The five tax proposals, recommended by the Commissioners' special tax committee, will raise an estimated $8,600,000, but only $7,500,000 will go into the general fund, where the deficit is anticipated.

The recommended additional taxes, all of which had been "suggested" previously, and the estimated revenue follow:

Motor vehicle by weight, $1,500,000.

One-cent increase in the gasoline tax, $1,100,000, which would go into the tax fund.

A 2 per cent general sales tax, $5,000,000.

Inheritance, $800,000.

Rise of insurance levies from 1½ to 2 per cent on premiums, $200,000.

The sales tax, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said, will include amusements but will allow exemptions on certain staple food products.

Will Seek to Borrow.

At the same time the Commissioners decided to ask for authority to borrow money from the Federal Treasury as needed until the revenue from the new taxes parallels expenditures.

They also voted to renew a request for $15,000 to make a general tax survey through the employment of experts. This authority was carried in the District supply bill as reported to the House, but the provision was stricken out on a point of order raised by members of the House District Committee.

Although the five-point program constitutes the last word of the Commissioners, the proposals have yet to run the gantlet of the Kennedy sub-committee and possibly the Thomas sub-committee on District appropriations.

It was still uncertain yesterday as to whether the House or the Senate group will move first to report District tax measures. The Commissioners, caught between two fires, will make the same tax recommendations to both sub-committees.

Kennedy is planning to submit a general resume of all local tax proposals to his sub-committee next Tuesday. At that time, he said, the members will select the measures they believe fairest and capable of erasing an anticipated deficit of between $6,000,000 and $7,500,000.

The latter figure is latest estimate of the deficit and is based on the assumption that the Senate sub-committee now conducting hearings on the District supply bill will restore all items to Budget Bureau estimates and will incorporate some $477,000 in supplemental and deficiency items.

Hazen, in announcing the Commissioners' decision, stated that they

Schoolgirl Bilks Apartment Owner Of Cash, Watches

A schoolgirl, blonde and about 14 years old, disappeared from the apartment of John L. MacDonald, 3800 Fourteenth street northwest, with $29.70 in cash and two watches, after convincing him she had come to get his daughter's purse, he told police yesterday.

As she was standing in the living room of the apartment, the girl was confronted suddenly by MacDonald.

"I've come to get Lois' purse," MacDonald told police she said.

Clad only in his underclothes, MacDonald went into the bedroom to get his bathrobe. When he returned, money, watches and girl were gone.

Tenth Precinct police, investigating, discovered that the girl, a short while earlier, had entered the office of the apartment manager while the latter was out and had taken some keys. When the manager returned she discussed with him renting an apartment for her mother.

Quadruplets Born To Oklahomans; 2 Boys and 2 Girls

Muskogee, Okla., May 19 (AP).—Quadruplets were born today to a farm woman with only her 16-year-old son as attendant.

One of the infants, a girl, born to Mr. and Mrs. William Mullins, died shortly after birth but the other three, two boys and a girl, appeared to be winning their fight for life in an incubator here.

Dr. H. K. Riddle, Coweta physician, arrived at the two-room farm home shortly after the multiple births. He said the infants were a month premature.

Silent Stranger Among Clews In New Keene Case Evidence

Many surprising clews in the strange disappearance of Charles F. Keene came to light yesterday, as Washington and Maryland detectives pushed an investigation. These were:

1. Keene, instead of being unnoticed on the Steamer District of Columbia when he disappeared, was the most conspicuous passenger on the boat. He wore a brown beret, was seen by everyone on deck.

2. A silent stranger was seen to buy him a bottle of beer at about 11 p. m. last Thursday night. Neither man spoke to the other.

3. A chamois pouch which did not belong to him was found in the litter of his disarrayed stateroom.

4. A new pair of glacee gloves which did belong to him also was found on the floor of his stateroom.

5. A black leather letter-purse which did not belong to him also was found. It was empty.

6. Keene's wristwatch strap, made of woven silver mesh, was torn from his wrist, the mesh being broken near the watch.

7. Keene is known to have carried very valuable precious stones on his person, including a $25,000 ruby and a large pearl. However, he is not believed to have had any gems with him Thursday night.

8. The brown beret which he wore aboard ship is missing. His street hat was found.

9. Keene was "blind" without his glasses. He could not walk 2 feet without them and always took them to bed. His glasses were found on the cabin floor, smashed. This tended to eliminate a theory he might have walked ashore at Old Point Comfort, where the boat stops for 30 minutes.

All these seemingly unrelated clews will be brought forth in testimony tomorrow morning at a public hearing in which Charles F. Keene, Jr., will dramatically question wit-

4 Democrats Seeking Robinson's Post After Slating Him for Court

Politics and People

Naming of Robinson, 65, Would Belie Age Plea of Roosevelt.

By Franklyn Waltman.

IT certainly would be one of the most ironical episodes in American history if the net result of the bitter controversy over the Supreme Court should be the naming of Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson to that high tribunal.

For almost four months Congress has been embroiled in the bitterest legislative fight to shake Capitol Hill for several decades. Men who have been friends and admirers for years now damn and denounce each other. Democratic Senators and Representatives have sweated blood in agony over the choice which the President's reorganization proposal forced on them—and a rift has developed in their party from which it may not recover for many years.

And for what? Why, in order to place the conservative, 65-year-old Joe Robinson from Arkansas on the Supreme Court which he strove so hard to wreck by destroying its prestige and the respect of the people for it.

No wonder the ardent New Dealers and the dreamers of the Administration groaned aloud yesterday as the Senate leaders stirred up an unexpected and an amazing demonstration of support for the Robinson appointment, and as word came that so confident were they that the Arkansan would be named to the vacancy left by Justice Van Devanter's retirement that a scramble started among Democrats for the leadership toga. Why, the Senate virtually confirmed—unofficially, of course—Senator Robinson to a Supreme Court place!

What, asked these dreamers, becomes of the argument that the Supreme Court requires an infusion of younger blood and more liberal viewpoint? Is it possible that the President is willing to demonstrate his evident insincerity about age being a compelling factor in the Supreme Court reorganization by naming to that tribunal a man 65 years old? How can it be said seriously that Senator Robinson's prospects for a Supreme Court appointment

SENATOR ROBINSON.

White House Silent As Scramble Grows

Barkley Takes Lead to Direct Party in Upper House.

By Sidney Olson.

So sure were a number of Democratic Senators yesterday that Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, will be named by the President to succeed Justice Willis Van Devanter on the Supreme Court that four candidates appeared for the post Robinson now holds—majority leader of the Senate.

Republicans joining in this view also appeared so confident Robinson would be named that Minority Leader Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, promised he would urge unanimous confirmation of Robinson if he were appointed.

Leaders on both sides declared Robinson's name would not even be sent to a committee for preliminary study.

Candidates Listed.

The swift behind-the-scenes scramble for the toga of leadership which Robinson has not yet exchanged for the gown of a Supreme Court Justice—as the White House maintained complete silence on the appointment yesterday—brought at once four Democrats to the fore.

These were Assistant Floor Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, president pro tempore; Key Pittman, of Nevada; Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, and James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina.

Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, chairman of the Finance Committee, also mentioned, virtually withdrew from the race during the day, while Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, declared himself out by insisting: "I have never sought nor do I now seek any higher office than that I now possess. I am truly flattered by the mention of my name in any such connection, of course."

Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, Republican leader in the Senate, said: "I don't know of a man on my side who would raise the smallest objection to Senator Robinson's promotion to the Supreme Court. I will personally move that he be confirmed unanimously."

One Administration leader, close to the White House, said:

"Senator Robinson's appointment would go far to mollify and pacify the so-called rebellious South. Further, his name is the only one I know that would pass the Senate unanimously and swiftly.

Compromise Drive.

Senator Robinson, meanwhile, and other leaders, continued to seek support for a compromise on the President's court reorganization bill, which was killed by the Senate Judiciary Committee in a 10-to-8 vote Tuesday.

Although the bill itself appeared to be fading into the background of Senate discussion, the leaders pressed for a line-up behind the compromise of Senator Matthew M. Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, which raises the court's age limit to 75 years, limits the membership to nine members, but allows one temporary appointment every calendar year for every justice now over 75.

The Senate Judiciary Committee also voted against this compromise Tuesday, 10 to 8. Opposition leaders, supremely confident last night that an addition of six justices to the court was definitely defeated, claimed the compromise proposal had come too late.

Senator William H. King, of Utah, chairman of the Judiciary sub-committee, of the majority which will write the adverse report recom-

Peace in Steel Depends Upon Election Today

Workers to Decide Which Union Will Bargain for Them.

On the Labor Front.

A tense situation developed in Pennsylvania as the Steel Workers Organizing Committee charged steel concerns were attempting to influence the election today in which Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation employes will select their collective bargaining representative.

Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan acted swiftly to end a power strike that spread industrial paralysis through the populous Saginaw Valley.

The striking Federated Motion Picture Crafts repudiated a demand from its publicity committee for a Nation-wide boycott against films in which five members of the Screen Actors Guild appear.

Pittsburgh, May 19.—Leaders of organized steel labor ordered their followers to the polls tomorrow in a collective bargaining election which union members said would determine a course of peace or war affecting more than 200,000 steel workers.

A tenseness overhung the mill sections of Pittsburgh and nearby Aliquippa tonight in the wake of Philip Murray's charge that police agents of the Republic Steel Corporation were in Aliquippa to "interfere" in the election of 27,000 Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation workers.

Twenty-four State policemen were on duty in Aliquippa on the eve of the biggest election ever held under supervision of the National Labor Relations Board.

J. H. Roraback, G. O. P. Leader, Ends Own Life

Power Chief in Connecticut Member of Republican 'Old Guard.'

By the Associated Press.

South Harwington, Conn., May 19.—J. Henry Roraback, veteran Republican National Committeeman who was a prominent figure in the country's political scene for more than a quarter of a century, shot and killed himself today in his hunting lodge here.

The body of the 67-year-old president of the Connecticut Light & Power Co. who led the Republican Party in this State for over 25 years, was found between the lodge and a garage, a .32 caliber revolver bullet in his head.

Dr. H. B. Hanchett, Torrington medical examiner, who with Dr. Winchfield Wright, Thomaston medical examiner, concurred on suicide as a death verdict, said Roraback came to the lodge, Valley View farm, last night.

Roraback had been in poor health since early 1936 when he became ill with a septic sore throat. For several weeks friends feared he would not live, but he rallied, went to Florida to recuperate and attended the Republican National Convention in June. He did not regain complete health, however.

Today Roraback spent the forenoon smoking and reading, the medical examiner said, then told a son, Lewis, to telephone his mother that they would motor to Hartford starting almost at once.

While Lewis was telephoning, he told Dr. Hanchett, there was a sharp crack outside the house, but he thought nothing of it at the moment.

Morrow's Will Slights Sister Whose Son Cheered for Navy

Gen. Jay J. Morrow has gone to the reward of a soldier, but yesterday he evened the score with a nephew who dared to sit with him and cheer for the Navy at an Army-Navy football game.

The general's will was filed for probate in Hackensack, N. J., yesterday, and it then became known that for his brash act the nephew's mother, a Washingtonian, was deprived of an old soldier's treasure—a picture of the Military Academy at West Point.

In the will's codicil, Gen. Morrow recalled a certain Army-Navy gridiron classic several years ago. The general attended the game. So did the nephew, a son of Mrs. Agnes M. Scandrett, whose home is at 5 Westwood drive, Westmoreland Hills, a Maryland suburb.

The general cheered for the Army, of course. But the nephew's yells were for the Navy, and the general, remembering, preserved in the codicil of his will another version of Army-Navy animus:

"I'm leaving Agnes out of this because one of her sons sat beside me at an Army-Navy football game, in an Army seat, and cheered lustily for the Navy."

But when it came to a division of possessions whose monetary rating was higher but personal attachment less than a picture of West Point, Gen. Morrow forgot traditional rivalry of the services.

The sister was left approximately a third of the estate, according to an estimate last night by a daughter of Mrs. Scandrett, Mrs. Lucien Greathouse, who was present when the will and its codicil were read before members of the family shortly after the general died.

None of those present at the reading was able to recall, Mrs. Greathouse said, which of the nephews had been the offender at the football game—Jay J. M. Scandrett, named for Gen. Morrow, or Richard B. Scandrett.

Jay Scandrett, who lives in California, was an ensign in the Navy during the World War, and this early connection makes him a

Federal Deficit Is Estimated At 2½ Billions

By William V. Nessly.

Economies being practiced by Government departments and agencies in conformity with President Roosevelt's letter of April 7, urging all possible saving in expenditures, still will leave the Government with an estimated deficit of $2,557,000,000 at the end of this fiscal year, June 30, it was disclosed yesterday.

This estimate, made by the President in his revised forecasts of expenditures and receipts on April 20, is exclusive of debt retirement requirements, and is an increase of $309,200,000 over the January estimate.

While the opinion had been widespread that economies called for in the President's letter were designed to reduce the deficit below the April 20 estimate, it was disclosed yesterday at the Bureau of the Budget that current economies were anticipated and provided for when estimated expenditures were reduced $295,000,000 in the revised estimates.

Meanwhile, at the Budget Bureau it was said revenues are holding up well in conformity with revised estimates of last month, with indications revenues in some branches might go over the estimates.

Scope as Yet Unknown.

At the same time it was said extent of the savings now being made will not be known until the end of the fiscal year. It was pointed out that field establishments of the departments and agencies involved are so widely scattered it will take considerable time to determine the full scope of the economies possible to be practiced up to June 30.

Reports of heads of the departments and agencies, transmitted prior to May 1 as the President requested, were necessarily lacking in figures. However, determination to comply with the order for strict limitation on expenditures was expressed in all, and steps to put the order into effect were reported on.

Reports declared "most careful study" of possibilities of savings were being made. All administrative officers were instructed to defer expenditures wherever possible. In one department a conference was called of all those charged with responsibility for expenditures and instructions were given and plans drawn for the elimination or deferring of all possible outlays of money. In another, the report said, positions made vacant are not being filled, in order to economize.

Co-operation Hailed.

These reports had led President Roosevelt to remark Tuesday that excellent co-operation had been given him in the economy project and to express belief the economies would be accomplished.

It was said at the Budget Bureau that in line with the President's call for curtailing of outlays, the revised estimates of expenditures had been trimmed to rock bottom, accounting for the $295,000,000 slash. Final reports from the departments at the end of the fiscal year will disclose whether that reduction was attained. Doubt was expressed at the bureau that it would be exceeded.

Apparent slashes are expected in some departments where, in the final 30 or 60 days of the fiscal year, funds still left from appropriations are used for laying in supplies. It was pointed out, however, that such buying relieves the burden of costs in the next fiscal year.

Defends "Spenders."

The budget director was quick to defend those in charge of expenditures in the Government departments when it was suggested that they like to spend all the money they have available.

When surpise was expressed savings could be effected after the "fine-tooth combing" that department estimates are given by the Budget Bureau and appropriations committees of Congress, it was explained that in such a vast organization as a Government department a cushion of funds must be available. Some divisions of the department may have a portion of their funds left while others must use all the money available.

Retention of the monetary cushion is the objective of the present economy drive.

Morgenthau, Committee Plan June Borrowing

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau met yesterday with members of the Federal Reserve Board's open market committee to make preliminary plans for the Treasury's mid-June borrowing.

The Treasury is expected to borrow a sum for new cash together with $300,000,000 to meet maturing bills.

After conferring with the Secretary, the committee met alone to canvass the Government bond market and determine whether buying operations are desirable in the immediate future.

Proposal to Appoint Senator Robinson, 65, to Court Challenges Roosevelt's Sincerity.

By Franklyn Waltman

are better than those of anyone else?

Strange though this episode is, it is no less strange and unreal than the entire Supreme Court controversy precipitated last February by the President. And yet there is plausibility and logic to the movement to place Senator Robinson on the Supreme Court bench and there is reason to believe that he will receive the appointment, no matter how distasteful to President Roosevelt and some of the New Dealers.

WALTMAN.

Mr. Roosevelt is being enmeshed in a web of events of his own making from which it will be difficult and costly for him to escape. Let us demonstrate the case for Senator Robinson, for whom this writer has a great fondness and admiration. He would make a far better Supreme Court justice than some of the panting New Dealers and immature lawyers who have been mentioned so often and so frequently by their friends as possible appointees.

But to get down to the practicalities of the situation. For four years now a report has been widespread on Capitol Hill—and has come to be believed by almost everyone up there—that at the beginning of the New Deal the President led Senator Robinson—or his friends—to believe he would receive the first Roosevelt appointment to the Supreme Court.

Common gossip has it that this rich plum was dangled before Senator Robinson's eyes as a reward for his steadfast loyalty to and defense of the New Deal. Whether this is exactly true or not does not make a great deal of difference. The important thing is that it is generally believed.

Moreover Senator Robinson has lived up in full measure to his part of the bargain, if bargain there was. No man has given such loyal support to the President and his policies as has Senator Robinson. In the interest of the President and his party, the Arkansan cast aside whatever personal predilections he may have had and became as ardent a New Dealer as ever trod the political pathways.

The spontaneity and unanimity of the Senate demonstration in behalf of Senator Robinson's appointment to the Supreme Court is evidence of the feeling there that the Arkansan deserves this coveted honor. In view of that manifestation of Senate sentiment any nominee other than Senator Robinson undoubtedly would have hard sledding in winning confirmation.

The appointment of Senator Robinson would be a recognition of the importance of the South to the Democratic Party. It also would be an act of appeasement to those conservative Democrats who have been driven away from Mr. Roosevelt's side by his Supreme Court bill. It would be a valuable healing liniment for the wounds of the party.

But over and above all else, it would indicate Mr. Roosevelt remains wedded to the most successful of all political rules: "Reward your friends, punish your enemies." The application of such a rule is what makes party politics and party action the effective thing it is in this country. By naming Senator Robinson to the Supreme Court the President will be able to show his gratitude to the Arkansan and to pay him for all the mental suffering he has undergone in the last four years—and the President also will thus serve notice that those who suffer on his behalf do not suffer in vain.

Not to appoint Senator Robinson—in view of what happened on Capitol Hill yesterday—would be to affront an old friend and loyal supporter, especially if Senator Robinson desires the appointment, which everyone thinks he does. Of course, Senator Robinson, if he is given to understand the appointment is beyond his reach, may deny indignantly he ever wanted the honor, but his friends will only believe he is being a good soldier and their resentment will be increased. And the rift within the Democratic Party will grow.

No matter how ironical it may be, despite how strange and unreal it sounds, the smartest play Mr. Roosevelt can make is to name Senator Robinson to the court and undertake to forget he once talked about the necessity of "young blood" and liberal viewpoints for the Supreme Court. It is the only way he can retrieve his rapidly diminishing support in the Senate. But what an end to the ill-fated battle of the century over the Supreme Court!

"I hear you are going to lose your leader," said a visitor in the Capitol to one of the Democratic Senators yesterday morning.

"If we don't, the President will," was the reply.

Welles and Moore Get New Posts in State Department

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt announced two important State Department personnel changes yesterday, sending to the Senate the nominations of Sumner Welles, of Maryland, to be Undersecretary of State and R. Walton Moore, of Virginia, to be department counselor.

Moore and Welles now are serving as Assistant Secretaries of State.

Welles was named to the Undersecretaryship which has been vacant since William Phillips was appointed Ambassador to Italy last year.

Welles has been connected with the diplomatic service approximately half of his 44 years, beginning as secretary of embassy at Tokyo. He has been Assistant Secretary since April, 1933, except for an eight-month term that year as Ambassador to Cuba.

Moore, who is 78 and a resident of Fairfax, Va., is a former Democratic member of the House, having served in that body from 1919 to 1931.

The President also nominated John Cudahy, of Wisconsin, as Minister to the Irish Free State; Alvin Mansfield Owsley, of Texas, as Minister to Denemark, and Edwin L. Neville, of Ohio, as Minister to Siam.

High Court Ruling On Utilities Asked

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission asked the Supreme Court yesterday to speed a decision on constitutionality of the 1935 public utility holding company act.

The commission joined the Electric Bond & Share Co., of New York, in asking for a review on an appeal directly from a New York district court. Usually an appeal would be taken first to the circuit court of appeals.

33 Companies Ordered to End Pact on Prices

F. T. C. Acts on Complaint of City Heads Against Identical Bids.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission ordered 33 companies in 18 States yesterday to discontinue a price-fixing arrangement in the sale of equipment for water supply systems.

The order followed an inquiry in which many city officials, including Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, protested identical bidding on such equipment. Should the edict be violated, the commission has authority to ask the courts to enforce it.

The companies manufacture hydrants, water gate valves, fittings and similar products. The commission said they dominate the industry throughout the country.

The order also applied to the water works valve and hydrant group of the Valve and Fittings Institute, New York, of which 32 of the companies are members.

The commission's findings in the case, the statement added, are that the manufacturers' practices "have a dangerous tendency to hinder and prevent price competition, have increased prices, and have created in the respondent members of the water works valve and hydrant group a monopoly in the sale and resale of their products in interstate commerce."

Action against the group followed by about six weeks President Roosevelt's criticism of the rise in durable goods prices generally.

Some observers interpreted the order as an indication of one method to be employed in Administration efforts to control prices in the durable goods group.

They recalled that Attorney General Cummings advised the President recently that the Federal Trade Commission might have power to act concerning complaints by Secretary Ickes that steel companies had submitted identical bids on Government orders.

2 in Hatchet Death May Seek to Shift Blame to Other

By the Associated Press.

Jersey City, N. J., May 19.—Detectives testified today that Gladys MacKnight, 17, pointed at her red-haired sweetheart and said "he did it" when they were arrested after the hatchet slaying of the girl's mother.

With this testimony, the State neared the end of its case against the slim young high school graduate and Donald Wightman, 18, a former choir singer. Only four prosecution witnesses remained at the end of the third day of their murder trial.

There was a possibility that Gladys and Donald, who were expected to blame each other for the slaying, would take the witness stand tomorrow in their own defense. The State to ask the deathpenalty.

Text of Veto on Fair Fund

Text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress vetoing a bill appropriating $5,000,000 for the New York Worlds Fair:

I return herewith, without my approval, House joint resolution 304, entitled "joint resolution authorizing Federal participation in the New York World's Fair 1939."

The disapproval on my part spring from two causes.

The first reason is the amount of the appropriation. I have been fully advised of the importance of the World's Fair and celebration to be held in the City of New York during the year 1939. I have given full support and encouragement to the plans for holding this exposition. Nevertheless, in view of the efforts of the Congress and the Administration to bring Federal expenditures within the scope of Federal revenues as rapidly as possible, I am compelled to conclude that the sum of $5,000,000, proposed to be appropriated by the Federal Government, is excessive. Consultation with Executive Departments leads me to believe that a sum definitely smaller would be sufficient to provide adequate representation of the Federal Government at the World's Fair in New York City in 1939.

"Second Reason."

The second reason is equally compelling. The joint resolution establishes a commission to be known as the United States New York World's Fair Commission, to be composed of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of Labor, the chairman and the ranking majority and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Commerce of the United States Senate, the two United States Senators from the State of New York and the chairman and the ranking majority and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives. It is proposed that this commission shall appoint a commissioner general and that the latter shall appoint two assistants, with the approval of the commission. The commission shall prescribe the duties of the commissioner general, delegate powers and functions to him, appoint clerks, etc., fix their salaries, purchase materials, contract for labor and services, and, in general, conduct, either directly or by delegation, all of the administrative functions of the Government of the United States in the expenditure of the appropriation authorized.

"Unconstitutional."

In other words, the commission composed in greater part of members of the two Houses of the Congress is specifically given complete administrative authority for the expenditure of public funds.

I have consulted with the Attorney General of the United States and am advised by him as follows:

"In my opinion those provisions of the joint resolution establishing a commission composed largely of members of the Congress and authorizing them to appoint a United States commissioner general and two assistant commissioners for the New York World's Fair, and also providing for the expenditure of the appropriation made by the resolution and for the administration of the resolution generally amount to an unconstitutional invasion of the province of the executive."

I shall be glad at any time to furnish a copy of the complete opinion of the Attorney General to the Congress.

Atlas Tack Chief Threatens Lawyer

New York, May 19 (AP).—Roger D. Edwards, of New Bedford, Mass., husky 6 foot 6 president of the Atlas Tack Corporation, threatened to throw a Government attorney "out of the window" during today's hearing of a Federal complaint accusing brokers of illegally manipulating Atlas stock. The Agriculture Department predicted yesterday cattle prices the remainder of this year will continue to average higher than in 1936.

It said increased consumer demand for meat and higher prices for hides caused packer to pay 13 per cent higher prices for cattle the first quarter of this year than in 1936.

'Cummings' Aid May Be Sought In Jordon Case

House Group Wants Facts Obscure at Murder Trial of Man.

The "crime subcommittee" of the House District Committee, which is inquiring into the case of Thomas Jordon, 31-year-old short-order cook now awaiting death in the electric chair, may call Attorney General Homer Cummings as a witness, it was learned late yesterday.

For two days now the sub-committee has listened while John M. Holzworth, erstwhile attorney for Jordon, has cited evidence helpful to Jordon that was never brought to light at his trial. It heard Holzworth call off the names of eye-witnesses who were never asked to identify Jordon and never called for the trial. It heard him list policemen and others with information who were never asked to testify.

Holzworth told the sub-committee that all the unused evidence, together with the names of witnesses who were never asked to tstify, is in the possession of the Department of Jutice, which recently has been making a fresh investigation of the case for President Roosevelt.

Also Request Evidence.

To complete their own picture of the Jordon case, members of the sub-committee want Attorney General Cummings to come before them and bring with him the evidence Holzworth mentioned.

This includes a police ineidental, or lookout, which was broadcast on the Good Friday night in 1931 that Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, cashier of the Garden T-Shoppe, was mortally wounded during a holdup. This lookout, based on information given the police by Mrs. Jaynes, described the two holdup men as 6-footers, and added that the one with "gray eyes, fair hair * * * held the gun."

Jordon, who is scheduled to die June 14 for Mrs. Jaynes' murder, is far from a 6-footer. He is only 5 feet 6¼. Moreover, he has dark eyes and black hair.

The police lookout never was shown at Jordon's trial in March, 1936. In fact, the public never knew of its existence until Holzworth recently unearthed it among old police files.

New Evidence Led to Stay.

It was the discovery of this lookout, together with statements given to the Department of Justice by witnesses who were never called to Jordon's trial, that recently led President Roosevelt to postpone Jordon's execution for a month. He was scheduled to die last Friday.

The investigation being conducted by the House District sub-committee is being held behind closed doors. At first it was expected to be a hurried and somewhat perfunctory inquiry. Now, however, it has lasted two days and may continue for several more days.

The answer to this, it was reported on good authority, is that members of the sub-committee—some of them, at least—have been astonished to learn that so much important evidence could remain in the dark when a man's life was at stake.

The members want to know why this evidence was not brought to light. Holzworth has given them one version, and now they want Attorney General Cummings' version.

Two Witnesses Heard.

The sub-committee, which is headed by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, and includes Representatives Schaefer (Democrat), of Illinois; Sacks (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; Bigelow (Democrat), of Ohio, and Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, heard two witnesses yesterday, and then recessed to 1:30 p. m. today.

Holzworth was one witness and the other was Arthur C. Harmon, foreman of the jury that found Jordon guilty of first-degree murder. Harmon was called to give his version of what went on while the jury wrangled for 24 hours over Jordon's fate.

On Tuesday the sub-committee questioned Israel T. Good, another member of the jury. It was Good who went before Justice F. Dickinson Letts after Jordon's trial and charged that the other 11 jurors did not understand his instructions. Good said he was convinced the shooting of Mrs. Jaynes was accidental, and wanted to vote for second-degree murder, but that the others were under the impression that they had to vote either for first-degree or not guilty.

Wanted Charge Repeated.

Good told Justice Letts he pleaded in vain with the foreman of the jury to go before the court and have the instructions repeated, but that the foreman would make no such effort, arguing that it would be a "reflection" on the jury.

The sub-committee had expected yesterday to hear F. C. Schneider, but he had to attend a funeral.

Seven Fishermen But Not a Herring in Sight

Post Staff Photo.

The annual herring run up the Potomac had these fishermen casting snagging hooks into the river near Chain Bridge yesterday. But the herring were few and far between.

Hundreds Line Potomac Banks A-Snaggin' Bushels of Herring

A Stout Line With Several Hooks, Strong Arms for Vigorous Swishing Are Equipment Enough for Spring Sport.

Hundreds of men and women, boys and girls and one baby stood on the banks of the Potomac yesterday in quest of the herring. It is an annual practice.

"They've been catchin' 'em for some days down there now . . . They snag 'em . . . One man snagged four bushel baskets full of herring the other afternoon . . . You ought to see 'em snag 'em . . . They use long poles with two or three stationary hooks on the end . . . It's hard work snagging 'em . . . You have to keep dashing and thrashing and swashing the hooks through the water . . . It doesn't matter where you snag 'em . . . You can snag 'em in the head or in the back or round about the tail . . . The hooks have got barbs on 'em . . . When you snag 'em you can pull 'em out."

A-Snaggin' on Both Sides.

The men and women and boys and girls and the one baby could be seen snagging them on both sides of the river. It was an idyllic setting to snag the herring in. On the Virginia side of the river rose great hillsides, lush and green. On the Maryland side of the river rose great hillsides, green and lush. Buds and blossoms were all about. Little birds darted around in the air. The fishermen and fisherwomen were the only tense objects on the landscape. Snagging the herring is a tense occupation. It calls for concentration, much perseverence.

A man wearing a blue shirt and a pair of old trousers stood on a rock, a-snagging. That is, he had been snagging, but snagging wasn't very good yesterday because the river was too fast and there was too much wind. At the moment he was casting and the evidence was at his feet. A small string of white perch was tied to a tremendous iron ring that was fastened to a rock. A drove of small black insects spiraled like sparks about the catch.

"There aren't many herring today," said the fisherman.

"All the fish seem to be at this end of the line," said a stout lady who was dressed in men's trousers.

Fisherman Snags Rock.

"Which way do the herring come from?" the man in the blue shirt was asked.

"They come from down the river," he said.

"They go up the river to spawn," said the lady in the trousers.

Farther down the stream you could see a fisherman occasionally snag one. This frequently occasioned a shout indicative of success. The baby, held in a man's arms, wasn't doing so well. The lady fishers seemed to be doing nothing at all.

"It isn't like this always," said the man in the blue shirt. . . . "Generally we snag them this time of year . . . a bad day . . . Too much wind, water too fast . . . Some of the crowd's gone home already."

He cast and the line played downstream. The line grew tense. So did the fisherman. He jerked at the line and his body heaved in the middle. The lady in the man's trousers ran to his side. The line snapped back, broken.

"You missed a big one!" cried the lady.

Visiting Girl Asks For Bloodhounds To Trail Lost Pet

Her pet chow dog being missing since it was struck by an automobile several days ago, Miss Anne Marie Kitterman, 23-year-old Londoner, yesterday sought the aid of bloodhounds to trail her injured pet, which ran away.

Miss Kitterman, who is touring the world with the chow as her only companion, requested the use of bloodhounds from Lorton Reformatory in an effort to find the dog, which was struck on Sixteenth street northwest Monday night. The use of the prison dogs was refused on the grounds they were trained only to track humans.

Miss Kitterman was heartbroken at the loss of her 3-month-old Ming Toy. She said she followed a trail of blood for many blocks but it had given out. She feels the animal is dying in some corner.

Police sent a lookout for the dog while Miss Kitterman enlisted the aid of E. Roy Routt, who runs a kennel in Silver Spring, Md. They began to cruise through Rock Creek Park and searched Meridian Park near where the dog was struck.

New York, May 19 (AP).—Huddled under the blankets on her cot, Mrs. Helen Tiernan moaned in a Long Island jail cell at Riverhead tonight awaiting the grand jury's action on a charge that she murdered her 7-year-old daughter for love of a man. "She's going to pieces fast," said Mrs. William McCollom, wife of the sheriff.

Those indicted were Pearl A. Pratt, county auditor; Dan C. Japan's Peers Attack Premier and Cabinet

Tokyo, May 19 (AP).—Two important groups in the Japanese House of Peers, the Doseikai and Dowakai, launched a movement today to overthrow the cabinets of Premier Senjuro Hayashi. The peers' attack, charged that Hawashi's continuance in office after his recent overwhelming defeat in national elections was unpardonable from the point of view of political morals.

Experts Shake Old Theories On Zep Blast

Broken Propeller and Motor Spark Ideas Both Discounted.

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 19.—Testimony tending to disprove two theories for the Hindenburg disaster was placed today before Federal investigators.

Frank W. Caldwell, of Hartford, Conn., called by officials one of the leading propeller authorities in the country, said it was his opinion that the port blades were intact until the ship hit the ground.

Board members had considered the possibility a broken blade, whirled into the ship's hull, might have caused a spark igniting the hydrogen. They found a piece of propeller inside the hull wreckage on the naval air station field.

Another theory, that a rear motor might have shot sparks into escaping hydrogen, was jolted by Heinrick Bauer, watch officer, in charge of valving gas.

Previous Testimony.

Previous witnesses placed the first fire in cell No. 4, near the stern, and Bauer said no gas was released from this cell within ten minutes of the accident.

Officers stationed in the control cabin were among the day's witnesses and they painted a picture of the scene inside this portion of the great vessel when she sailed into her death in the twilight of May 6.

Stationed at control wheels and indicators, they said nothing untoward was noted in the nerve center of the Hindenburg as she maneuvered toward the mast and dropped her forward landing ropes. Officers then felt and heard the explosion. Some of them leaped to the windows, saw the fire or its reflection, and then jumped when it neared the ground.

Helium Study Planned.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Roper revealed yesterday that a Presidentially appointed committee of five Cabinet members would be ready to confer with Dr. Hugo Eckener next week about a supply of fire-proof helium gas for German airships.

Roper said President Roosevelt has named the Secretaries of State, Interior, War, Navy and Commerce to consider procedure with respect to releasing helium to other countries for commercial purposes.

The United States, the only nation producing the gas in other than negligible quantities, forbids its export except for experimental purposes.

Eckener, the German dirigible expert, now is at Lakehurst, N. J., investigating the recent distruction of the Hindenburg. After that disaster Germany grounded its other dirigibles which, like the Hindenburg, use hydrogen. Officials said Eckener is expected here next week.

Bombers Force Basque Retreat; Village Razed

Basque troops gave up a 4-mile stretch of muddy road on the centreal eastern front, but in the north the insurgent advance was halted 7 miles from the capital in the Sollube hills.

Amorebieta, normally a city of 6,000, was described by Basque commanders as a new "altar of sacrifice" for defense of the Spanish republic.

A radio broadcast from Bilbao said insurgent planes dumped loads of incendiary bombs creating havoc in the town, but an insurgent broadcast declared the town had been dynamited systematically and fired before the Basques evacuated.

Insurgent reports said the retreating Basques splashed the better houses with gasoline and then fired them with hand grenades after herding all of Amorebieta's male civilian population before them into Galdacano.

(Tales of terror in Amorebieta were told by 500 women and children refugees who straggled through the insurgent lines seeking food and sanctuary.)

Miaja Regains Civil Powers.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, May 19.—Madrid's defense chieftain, Gen. Jose Miaja, resumed control of public order tonight after less than a month of government by a newly organized city council.

Miaja had directed both civil and military activities in the Madrid area since the beginning of the insurgent siege last fall. He relinquished civil powers April 23.

His return to supreme command to replace the council apparently was part of Premier Juan Negrin's program to consolidate authority despite criticism by anarcho-syndicalists, who refused to co-operate with his government. The anarchists fundamentally are opposed to any government; the syndicalists would govern each industry with labor syndicates.

Miaja was noted for a firm hand in ruling the city. He is known as the "saviour of Madrid" for his military direction which has kept insurgents from the capital and resulted in decisive defeat of the Fascist enemy during the Guadalajara campaign on the northern Madrid front.

Strikers Heed Murphy's Plea On Power Tieup

By the Associated Press.

Saginaw, Mich., May 19.—Striking employes of the Consumers Power Co. in the Saginaw Valley agreed tonight to return to work immediately, restoring electric power as soon as possible.

The decision was reached after the company and the United Automobile Workers of America, which called the strike, both accepted the "order" of Gov. Frank Murphy to meet in his office at Lansing at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

Industries in Saginaw, Flint, Bay City and scores of smaller communities had been paralized by the suspension of electric service. Bay City was without gas also.

Gov. Murphy, mediator in Michigan's recent automotive strikes, intervened in the utility tieup almost as soon as it began.

Ask Strikers to Return.

At the emphatic "request" of the Governor, Wyndham Mortimer, first vice president of the United Automobile Workers of America, asked the strikers to restore electric service in Saginaw, Flint, Bay City and scores of lesser communities.

Murphy announced he had "ordered" representatives of the union and the power company to meet at his office in Lansing tomorrow.

He said he would issue "other orders" unless uninterrupted service is assured for the industries, including several General Motors Corporation units, which employ nearly 100,000 workers in the strike-affected area.

Late today all of Saginaw was without electric power except the hospitals and police department. The fire department operated its own generator. Traffic lights were out. Ice cream melted in powerless electric coolers. Grocers worried over spoilage of perishable foodstuffs. Thousands of industrial workers were thrown out of work.

Thousands are Idle.

In Bay City, 80 per cent of the mercantile and industrial establishments and 35 per cent of the homes were without current. Power continued to flow over circuits owned by the city, which buys power from the Consumers company and retails it to small users. One small hospital was without current briefly.

In Flint, switches were pulled depriving the Buick Motor Co. and Chevrolet Motor Co. of power. The A-C Spark Plug Co. plant also was closed because of the uncertain power supply. The three plants employ 30,000 persons.

The strike climaxed two weeks of negotiations between the union and company officials. It was precipitated by the company's refusal to consider the union's demands for a minimum wage of $160 a month. Mortimer said present wages ranged from $45 to $130 a month. Dan E. Karn, general manager, said the demanded increase would cost $3,500,000 a year. Mortimer reported that the company "made a profit of $8,816,198 for the 12 months ending in November, 1936" and "can afford to pay its employes a living wage."

Mrs. Mary Ella Cissell Is Buried in Oak Hill

Funeral services for Mrs. Ella Cissell, wife of John S. Cissell, Bethesda, Md., real estate dealer, were held yesterday at the home of her sister, Miss Carrie A. Schneider, 1612 Allison street northwest. Burial was in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Cissell, a native of Washington, died at her sister's home Monday. Her father, Christian Schneider, was engaged in the electrical business here for many years.

"I'm Still Waiting"—Mrs. Bilbo

SENATOR BILBO.

MRS. LINDA BILBO.

The Bilbo marital troubles were transferred to the Mississippi Supreme Court yesterday. In a cross bill filed after the Senator instituted divorce proceedings, Mrs. Bilbo charged "constant unfaithfulness" and related how she had always awaited his return to her, during periods when "he lived with someone else." The Bilbos have been married 34 years.

Sen. Bilbo's Domestic Squabble Sent to Mississippi High Court

Question of Jurisdiction Rises Over House Built at Jackson as 'Investment,' Occupied by Wife After He 'Moved Her Out.'

By the Associated Press.

Poplarville, Miss., May 19.—The public domestic squabble between United States Senator Theo G. Bilbo and his former school teacher wife he married 34 years ago was switched today to the Mississippi Supreme Court.

Judge Ben Stevens, of Pearl River County Chancery Court, granted an appeal of Earl Brewer, Mrs. Bilbo's counsel, that the State supreme court be allowed to rule on a question of jurisdiction in the case.

Bilbo sued for divorce, charging "habitual, cruel and inhuman" treatment. Mrs. Bilbo filed a cross-bill and answer in which she denied his allegations, sought temporary alimony of $2,500, lawyers' fees of $1,000 and asked for a legal separation and maintenance. She accused her husband of "constant unfaithfulness."

Both Bilbo and his wife appeared in court yesterday and today. Mrs. Bilbo several times broke into sobs, but her husband strolled around with apparent unconcern, his famous diamond horseshoe stickpin in an almost red necktie.

Mrs. Bilbo sought transfer of the case from the Pearl River Chancery Court to Jackson, the Mississippi capital where she twice reigned as first lady.

Bilbo moved to Jackson in 1924 and built a house there—a house which she testified she had occupied since he "moved her out" of the executive mansion during his second term as Governor, from 1928 to 1932.

The Senator contended he built the residence at Jackson as an investment, but his legal domicile was Poplarville.

The Senator testified yesterday that Mrs. Bilbo moved out of the mansion to their Jackson home because she "wanted to."

"She told me she wouldn't live with me first," he added.

Mrs. Bilbo denying his charges, testified he had returned to her after previous separations.

"He hasn't come back this time," she said. "The house is there in Jackson, I'm still waiting."

Pershing Rests, Fails to Attend London Dinner

Pilgrims Society Honors American Delegation to Coronation.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 19.—Gen. John J. Pershing was indisposed tonight following a strenuous coronation week program and failed to attend a farewell dinner of the Pilgrims Society.

It was learned the general, now 76 years old, was not ill, but had been advised to rest in view of his numerous appointments when he crosses the English Channel to France, probably Friday.

The society's function was a farewell dinner to the American mission to the coronation of King George VI, composed of Gen. Pershing, James W. Gerard, former United States Ambassador to Germany, and Admiral Hugh Rodman, as well as in honor of United States Ambassador Robert Worth Bingham.

Nearly 300 persons, numbering distinguished leaders in British official, diplomatic and business life, attended.

The venerable Archbishop of Canterbury, remarking on Gen. Pershing's absence, said he regretted the "hero of a hundred battles should be put out of action by the British climate."

Alfred Duff Cooper, secretary of state for war, paid high tribute to the absent general. The war minister said Americans were not "fair weather friends" but, referring to the World War, said they "came to us when we needed their assistance, needed it desperately, and the help they gave us was more valuable than diamonds and pearls."

Mr. Gerald told the Pilgrims the United States was determined on three things:

"Firstly, we are against war.

"Secondly, we are against alliances.

Morrow's Will Recalls Nephew Yelled for Navy

The picture of West Point went to either of the other sisters, Mrs. Hilda McIlwaine, of Tenafly, N. J., or Hilda Morrow, of New York.

The value of Gen. Morrow's estate was not given, but it distributed everything from real estate to jig-saw puzzles, according to the Associated Press. Of jig-saw puzzles, Gen. Morrow wrote:

"Whoever wants them, preferably Ruth Vorhees, may have my collection of jig-saw puzzles. I still think they were pretty good!"

To Jon Lindbergh, 4-year-old son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, the general left a set of cuff-links, four vest buttons and three studs, all in platinum and pearl.

Gen. Morrow wrote that the links and studs were left by his brother, the late Senator Morrow, to his daughter, the late Elizabeth Morrow Morgan, who in turn left them to him.

"I wish to preserve them for little Jon Lindbergh," the will explained, "but they might in the meantime be used by Dwight W. Morrow, jr."

That the reference to the Army-Navy game was written, in all probability, as much in fun as pique, is borne out by other portions of the will. For example, it was directed that "clothing and men's trappings be distributed to those most needing them if it can be done without a scene as in the opera 'Gianni Schicchi.'"

In the opera, the general's favorite, a wealthy Italian dies and leaves his estate to a monastery. Attempts of relatives to recover the estate create a humorous situation.

The Englewood (N. J.) Hospital was remembered with a $500 bequest. The general's home in Englewood was left to Alice Morrow, and a small estate at Vineyard Haven, Mass., to another sister, Mrs. McIlvaine.

One-fifth of the estate was left to Theodore G. Burton, jr., a son of Mrs. Byron C. Gibbs, of Healdsburgh, Calif., a niece of Gen. Morrow's wife. The balance of the estate was divided into 21 shares for distribution among the three sisters and nephews and nieces.

Burton also inherited some cuff-links with this comment:

"I have a pair of gold cuff-links, won at golf years ago. Keep them for Teddy, in the hope that he'll be a better golfer than his foster grandaddy was when he won them."

Nordgren Honored.

Oke C. Nordgren, a student at the Corcoran Art School for three years, received honorary mention in the American Academy in Rome competition, it was announced here yesterday. He lives at 1701 Connecticut avenue.

"I COMPARED THEM ALL... THEN PICKED CHRYSLER ROYAL!"

CLEVELAND

★ "WHEN I HEARD Chrysler was invading the low-priced field, I was intensely interested in what kind of car this Chrysler would be.

"I not only looked it over carefully... but compared it with the other cars in its field.

"I found none that approached the Chrysler Royal in sheer dollar-for-dollar value. And since I have owned it, it has exceeded my highest expectations... in economy ... in riding comfort... in performance ... and all-around driving satisfaction.

"With a wealth of engine power available, an amazing amount of room in the body, all modern safety devices, and outstanding smartness of styling, the car affords a pride of ownership which surpasses all other cars at its price."

★ "BEYOND COMPARISON FOR ROOM"
— MRS. OSCAR HOCKS, San Francisco

"I AM MORE pleased with the Chrysler Royal than any car I have owned. Its styling is so distinctively different. And really—no other car; even those priced considerably higher, compares with it for roominess. The safety of its all-steel body and powerful hydraulic brakes give me a genuine feeling of security."

ALL AMERICA IS TALKING ABOUT THIS AMAZING CAR!

★ "21 MILES PER GALLON ON COUNTRY TRIPS"
— GEO. C. BOURNE, Hammond, Ind.

"EVEN WITHOUT its remarkable economy, the Chrysler Royal would be a great car from the standpoint of power, pick-up, smoothness and riding comfort. But when you can have all those things in a great big roomy car, and still enjoy greater economy than smaller cars, you really have a miracle of automotive engineering."

★ "BEST LOOKING CAR OF THEM ALL!"
— ELMER HIRSCHHORN, New York

"I THINK THAT the Chrysler Royal is the best looking car on the road... and it certainly is a wonder to drive. I use my Royal in business, and in all kinds of driving, day in and day out, I easily show 18 miles per gallon. I never saw a better riding car and the extra roominess in the body is certainly a great contribution to the comfort of the passengers."

CHRYSLER INVADES THE LOW-PRICED FIELD!

THE BIG CHRYSLER Royal costs very little more than the lowest-priced cars. With the great new Gold Seal engine it is amazingly economical to drive. Easy to buy on convenient terms with the official Commercial Credit Company plan.

Col. Lindbergh Not to Observe Flight Birthday

To Spend 10th Anniversary of Paris Hop at English Home.

(Pictures on Page 18.)

By the Associated Press.

London, May 19.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has no wish to commemorate tomorrow the tenth anniversary of his epochal solo flight from New York to Paris.

Now 35 and grown more solemn and reticent than ever in the elapsed decade, the American expatriate succinctly told a questioning friend: "I did it. Why should I celebrate it?"

He will spend the day quietly at his country home at Long Barn with Mrs. Lindbergh and baby Jon. There will be no telephoned anniversary congratulations; the phone has been disconnected.

One of his friends spent two days with the colonel recently and remarked on the approaching anniversary of the flight which never has been duplicated.

"How am I going to celebrate it?" Lindbergh asked, his friend related today. "I am not. If anybody else wants to all right. But I won't participate in any observance."

The colonel's present interests and activities are known to very few.

"I was with him two days," the friend related, "but he volunteered nothing. He and the family seem supremely happy, though."

Ruling Angers Amy.

New York, May 19 (AP).—Amy Mollison, British aviatrix, sailed on the French liner Normandie today, bitterly denouncing the United States Department of Commerce for refusing to grant certificates to entrants in the proposed Lindbergh memorial flight from New York to Paris.

"It is not a stunt flight, and I don't agree with the Department of Commerce on their ruling," she said.

"They are very far behind the times, and the only reason they made the ruling against the flight is to protect Pan-American Airways, which is going to start a transatlantic line. The department is afraid that any disaster might prejudice Pan-American. The ruling is as good as saying that modern flying is not safe."

Mrs. Mollison said that while in Paris she would seek to have the flight rerouted from Montreal to Paris.

Race Described As Stunt.

By the Associated Press.

Commerce Department officials said with emphasis yesterday that a New York-Paris air race was a "stunt" and a dangerous one.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, assistant secretary in charge of Air Commerce, said of the projected race:

"These stunt planes are usually overloaded at the start. This makes them extra perilous and when you add the element of racing you have an impossible situation."

Johnson said his department sought additional regulations under the air commerce act which would give the department even greater power to restrict flying it deemed unsafe.

Third Cavalry Celebrates Birthday Anniversary

Third Cavalry Celebrates 91st Birthday by Fancy Maneuvers

Historic Regiment, First at Mexico City, Performs in Program Cheered by Hundreds as Battle Flag for Services Is Presented.

Proving that a nonagenarian can be nimble and lively, the Third United States Cavalry yesterday celebrated its ninety-first birthday anniversary with some of the fanciest maneuvers ever seen hereabouts.

The regiment, stationed at Fort Myer in its entirety with the exception of a squadron at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., presented a program which was cheered by hundreds of civilian admirers assembled at the review field.

Two dances, one for officers and the other for enlisted men, brought the celebration to a close last night.

First event on the day's crowded program was at 9 a. m., when the regiment presented the ceremony known as the escort to the standards. Next came the review in honor of Maj. Gen. Leon B. Kromer, chief of Cavalry, in which Col. J. M. Wainwright, commanding officer, led his troops at a walk, trot and gallop.

The review finished, the regiment formed in a hollow square on the field and Gen. Kromer presented the battle-streamer recently awarded to the Third Cavalry by the War Department for meritorious action in quelling the Lipan Indian uprising of 1856.

Though only 10 years old at the time of this outbreak, the regiment already had distinguished itself in the Mexican War, having been the first American outfit to raise the flag over the National Palace in Mexico City.

In yesterday's ceremonies, the old blue uniform of the "Mounted Rifles," as the regiment was originally known, was worn by the color bearers, color guard and the chief trumpeter.

Following presentation of the award, a congratulatory address was delivered by Col. Wainwright, then his men fell out for a barbecue picnic for their families and themselves.

Radio AmateurReported Zep SOS Thrice in 1936

One aftermath of the Hindenburg disaster was recounted at the Navy Department yesterday afternoon recalled that an amateur radio fan frequently reported the destruction of the Hindenburg during its trips last year.

The man, a radio experimenter in Chicago, called the Navy on at least three occasions last summer, reporting he had just picked up an SOS from the Hindenburg while it was over the ocean. Officers could not recall his name, as no record of his reports was available, and added he had not sent in a message during the only crossing this year.

High Tide Floats Launch Aground On Potomac Bar

Harbor police yesterday made two trips down the Potomac in an effort to rescue five persons from a small motor launch which had run aground 2 miles below Alexandria, but the passengers refused to leave.

The boat, owned by George LeDane, 2501 Fourteenth street northwest, struck a sand bar shortly after 3 a. m. The first police boat arrived about 9 a. m.

Wading out to the rescuers' craft, George A. King, 1930 K street northwest, returned to Washington for a smaller boat to use in removing the others. When he returned his friends, according to the police, remained on board until high tide floated the boat off.

mending that the President's bill "do not pass," showed no disposition yesterday to hurry the report through. He said smilingly:

"The adverse report will be in size somewhere between Plato's 'Republic' and 'Gone With the Wind.' It will require a great deal of work merely to assemble all of the hundreds of sound arguments against the President's plan."

Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, a supporter of the court bill, however, declared: "There is no possible excuse for delay. If the unfavorable report is not ready by next Monday I shall demand that it be expedited at once."

Opponents Jubilant.

Opposition leaders—especially Senators Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, and Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, both Democrats—were wreathed in smiles throughout the day. Some of the opposition believe, it was said, that the Administration is "on the spot," not only as to the court plan, but on the appointment of a successor to Justice Van Devanter.

Hot discussion went on throughout the day in Capitol corridors and Senate cloakrooms over Senator Robinson's eligibility and probability as the next Supreme Court justice.

The Constitution provides that "no Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time."

Wagner's View.

A few Senators argued that when the Senate passed recently a bill permitting Supreme Court Justices to retire at full pay for life all of the Senators became automatically ineligible.

Most held, however, that this would not operate. Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, often mentioned as a possibility himself for the Supreme Bench, said yesterday:

"That would be a very narrow construction, indeed. If the slightest doubt arose the Senate could quickly fix it." Senator Ashurst concurred in this view completely.

Meanwhile, Wagner's friends admitted possibility of his appointment seemed slight, as three justices now on the court are from New York—Cardozo, Hughes and Stone.

President Roosevelt said Tuesday he was not ready to venture an opinion on such eligibility and Attorney General Homer Cummings said yesterday it was a delicate question which he could not discuss. He did say that once Van Devanter's successor was appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, the appointment's legality would be unquestionable.

Robinson 64.

Robinson is 64 years old. He will be 65 on August 26, next. The President, in the message accompanying his court bill, stressed the need for "an infusion of new blood" in the judiciary, and has outlined a policy of appointing men less than 60 years old to the Supreme Court.

Administration leaders, however, asked if there would not be a boomerang of sentiment against the Administration for the appointment of Robinson, from the angle of his age, quickly suggested that Roosevelt had really meant "an infusion of new thought."

Senator Barkley seemed to have taken an early lead in a hasty poll of Senate sentiment on the yet unvacated leadership.

Barkley had no comment after his White House visit yesterday on the purport of his conversation with the President, but said that in his own personal view, Senator Robinson's name would be given "serious consideration" by Mr. Roosevelt.

A number of Senators interviewed during the session appeared to favor Barkley, but one Senator, Pat McCarran, of Nevada, definitely declared himself in favor of a leader from the West. Interviewed just as he entered Senator Pittman's office, McCarran stated:

Western Possibilities.

"It is time the West received consideration for the leadership. The South has been at the helm for some time. There are several outstanding possibilities in the West.

He later lauded Senator Pittman, his colleague, "as a man of long experience, and great ability."

There were some reports court-bill foes would join in objecting to raising any Senator to the leadership who had supported the court bill—with exception of Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina. This could not be confirmed, but the number of times Byrnes' name was mentioned indicated wide activity by his friends. Byrnes is a very close friend of Vice President John Nance Garner. Barkley, however, is believed to have the full support of Robinson, who named him assistant floor leader a long time back.

Roraback, Republican Leader Of Old Guard, Ends Own Life

back lying in the driveway midway between the garage and the lodge beside an automobile. Nearby was a pearl-handle .32 caliber revolver.

Dr. Hanchett said there was blood on the seat cushion in the coupe, indicating Roraback had seated himself in the car, fired a bullet which entered his head above the right ear, and then fell over the running board on to the ground.

The scene of the shooting was the site of last year's Republican gathering in June at which John D. Hamilton, National Republican Chairman, was guest of honor.

Rose to High Place.

The Republican leader, one of his party's few remaining old-guarders, rose to his position in the electric power and political fields from humble beginnings.

As a boy he played with toy dams and miniature water wheels near his home in Sheffield, Mass., a town in the lower Berkshires.

Years after he had scaled the heights, Roraback took a party of close friends back to the scene of his boyhood and, walking over a knoll overlooking Purling Brook, said:

"You can see some of the rocks piled in that brook where I made my first dam. That's where my first interest in water power developed."

But if he was known in power circles, he was still better known as his party's mentor in Connecticut.

He attended more than seven national Republican conventions in the years he was State chairman, as a delegate, and helped forge his party's bonds at numerous State conventions.

Friend of Governor.

Although prominent in the Republican cause, Roraback was personally friendly with Gov. Wilbur L. Cross, 75-year-old Democratic executive of the State, and on one occasion made a special effort to greet the scholarly former dean of the Yale graduate school at a Democratic State convention.

Last year at the Republican State convention, Roraback who presided, paid tribute to the Governor, then candidate for a fourth term at the head of his own party ticket in opposition to the man of Roraback's choice.

The laudatory remarks came as a complete surprise to the assembled delegates and when Roraback was asked about it later he merely remarked that he liked the Governor personally and believed him to be a "fine" chief executive.

Today, upon hearing of the Republican chieftain's death, Gov. Cross said:

"I am greatly shocked by the death of Mr. Roraback.

"Ever since I became Governor I have known him socially and have at times discussed with him the general affairs of the State. I discovered in him a man of unusual ability, who, though we differed politically, had at heart the public welfare. His death is a great loss to Connecticut."

Beginnings Humble.

Back in the days of Roraback's childhood he and his brother, Alberto, were deprived of the advantages offered many children owing to the family's lack of funds.

In this humble beginning, he trudged back and forth to school, educating himself, so that at 19 he was master of a small school in North Canaan. He also did some writing for the Canaan News.

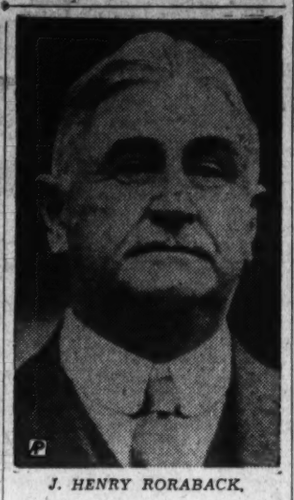
He was thrifty and put his money in the bank. Later he studied law in Alberto's office and was admitted to the Connecticut bar in 1892.

Last "Party Boss."

By the Associated Press.

Veteran politicians said yesterday the death of J. Henry Roraback, Republican national committeeman from Connecticut, marked the end of "the last real party boss" with State-wide control.

They held also that Roraback's



J. HENRY RORABACK.

death removed one of the few remaining members of the Republican Old Guard, which until six or seven years ago virtually controlled the party.

Few political bosses, experts said, ever held such complete control over a State-wide political machine as did Roraback. He was not only national committeeman, but chairman of the State central committee and party treasurer.

A powerful figure in the power industry, as president of the Connecticut Light & Power Co., Roraback was one of the chief targets for Senator Borah, of Idaho, last year when the Senator was campaigning to liberalize the party.

Compared to Taggart.

In national politics, Roraback frequently worked closely with Charles Hilles, party leader in New York. Together they figured in the back-stage negotiations at many national conventions.

Veteran political observers compared Roraback's power in Connecticut politics with that of Tom Taggart, in Indiana, years ago. Gone now are not only Taggart and Roraback, but Vare in Philadelphia, Pendergast, of Kansas City, has retired, although the latter's nephew is still running the show.

In the Republican Party, Roraback's peak of power was in the days when Senators Watson, Moses, Smoot and Reed, of Pennsylvania, were running the party in the Senate. They are still alive, but are no longer in Senate seats.

The Republicans, instead of holding control in the Senate, now have only 16 members. And about half of those are from the group that Moses once characterized as "sons of the wild jackass"—the Western independent faction.

Hamilton "Shocked."

Chairman John Hamilton, of the Republican National Committee, said, when informed of Roraback's death:

"I am shocked and saddened by the sudden death of Mr. Roraback. He was for many years a sincere and energetic Republican leader; a member of the natinoal committee since 1920 and one of its vice chairmen since 1932. Mr. Roraback had been on the Connecticut State committee since 1898 and was made its chairman in 1912."

Relief Cut Bloc Claims Assent Of White House

told the House "that I believe in cutting down not only on this, but on other amounts, and letting the world know that we are for economy, and that we are not assuming executive power in this House, but are doing what we think is best for the country."

May Seek Compromise.

He added the House will have a chance to "do something about that" on the relief bill. It was learned McReynolds may sponsor a $1,200,000,000 relief bill amendment, if the $500,000,000 cut fails. Although word has been passed that the President insists on $1,500,000,000, both McReynolds and Woodrum are expected to challenge this view.

Parrying this effort, a liberal group led by Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, is expected to offer an amendment increasing the amount to $2,200,000,000. Another "Progressive" group led by Representative Gerald Boileau, of Wisconsin, is expected to ask an increase to $3,000,000,000.

A series of other amendments was being prepared. Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, has two. One would require use of gold and silver stocks in paying the relief bill. Another would make aliens ineligible for relief. Representative Fritz G. Lanham, of Texas, was considering offering a "compromise" amendment on the amount of relief.

N. Y. Legislators Resentful.

Resentment at the President's veto of the New York World's Fair bill was apparent among New York Democrats in House and Senate.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee which made changes in the bill objectionable to the President, pointed out that the Chicago World's Fair, and other previous exhibitions in which the Government has participated, received larger appropriations.

Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, chairman of the House Rules Committee, sarcastically observed in the House that the veto was a "very courageous act on the part of the President, who comes from New York." He said the President was "erroneously" informed that the bill carried an appropriation—it was merely an authorization.

"The suggestion in the President's veto message that the commission was an infringement by the legislative branch of the Government upon the prerogatives of the executive, was rather novel—novel in these days."

Wallace Blasts FarmMeasure's Flexible Tariff

Indorses Bill 'Generally;' Denies 'Racket' Charge in Soil Payments.

By Russell Smith.

In one breath, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace yesterday passed sentence of execution upon the flexible tariff provision of the new farm bill, gently insisted upon precedence of his "ever-normal granary" plan in such legislation, and, "generally speaking," indorsed the measure.

In the next breath, the Secretary with equal gentleness challenged senatorial accusations of "racketeering" in payment of soil conservation benefits, but admitted he believed a formal contract between Government and grower would be "sounder, administratively" than present informal agreements.

His weekly press conference was dedicated principally to a discussion of the dissatisfaction expressed by Senators Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, in the Senate shortly before, when that chamber voted to extend to 1942 the authorization for the Secretary of Agriculture to pay soil conservation benefits.

Vandenberg Cites Case.

Vandenberg read a letter he said was from G. W. Anderson, of Sikeston, Mo., in which Anderson said he was paid $15 in October, shortly before election day, for signing an agreement to reduce his cotton acreage for the cotton season already ended.

Although Vandenberg "did not claim for a moment the incident is typical," he urged there be "some methods to police the expenditures of more than $400,000,000 annually for soil erosion."

This aroused Borah to proposal of a Congressional investigation and the intimation that higher officials had knowledge of such practices. "I think responsibility should be fixed," he concluded.

At his conference, Wallace, through aides who were present, indicated no benefit checks were mailed to Missouri in October, then replied to a questioner that "we have had some such cases." When he added that there "probably are a good many thousands of cases (of improper payments) pending in the comptroller's office," the air became electric, but he added quickly that these disputed payments are not comparable to that cited by Vandenberg.

Two Views on Payments.

He then launched into an exposition of conflicting views as to types of benefit payments. One view, he said, is that such payments should be made to the farmers, generally small farmers, who are more easily forced into uneconomic farming practices than the wealthier growers.

The other view is that it is not fair to penalize the farmers who already are planting so as to conserve soil, he added. In the present program an effort has been made to compromise these divergencies, he concluded.

With this, Wallace turned again in response to inquiries to his first detailed discussion of the pending farm bill.

"I think the farmers, generally speaking, have drawn up a very fine bill," he said. "From the press, however, I have gained the impression that the farmers didn't emphasize the 'ever-normal granary' bill as much as they might have, but perhaps this was because the press did not feature that phase of it."

"As long as the ever-normal granary is put first, and if (crop) control features are put in the bill as a step to support that plan, why then some such control is necessary to prevent another Farm Board fiasco."

As to the establishment of quotas for individual farmers, as provided in the bill, Wallace said that method "is probably as workable as any other."

After emphasizing cardinally the importance of "dovetailing" any farm program with the President's budgetary policy, Wallace then took apart the flexible tariff proposal embodied in the bill.

"Such a flexible tariff is, of course, not in accord with Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade treaty policies," he said. "I understand this tariff was put forward originally by Northeastern farmers who wanted to be assured they could get corn cheaply in time of drought.

"And I suppose there were some who were used to Republican tariff policies and put it in the bill just to have something to talk about."

Fat Girls Get The Go-By—Slim Girls Win Men

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. It is the duty of this tiny gland to make about one drop and a half every day of a vital fluid. This helps the body "burn" up food and excess fatty tissues just as a good draft of air helps the furnace to burn up coal without forming "clinkers". If this little gland doesn't make this drop and a half of fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat.

Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat.

Even the Florodora Girls couldn't keep Uncle Henry alert

He went in for rich foods and heavy liquors in vast quantities . . . Modern man eats more sensibly and, when he drinks, drinks lightly of a light whiskey

UNCLE HENRY'S routine was to dine at the Club, eat his way through a dozen courses, and then drop in at the Casino. Thus, packed to the gills with rich foods and heavy liquors, he never saw much of what went on behind the footlights.

Man today simply can't afford to have habits like Uncle Henry's. His life is too active, too competitive. He eats lightly, and if he drinks, drinks lightly of a light whiskey—like IRISH AMERICAN. The exceptional lightness and distinctive flavor of IRISH AMERICAN—derived from the combination of a fine, robust pot still whiskey and a specially distilled American whiskey—is a real treat for the palate. Wherever sensible, knowing drinkers gather, IRISH AMERICAN is much in demand . . . and its price is as sensible and up-to-date as the whiskey itself!

Surprise Clews, Silent Stranger Bear on Keene

Unidentified Man Bought Victim Beer Without Speaking to Him.

Four detectives worked in unison on the case yesterday, two ace men from the Maryland State police and two from Washington. They spent the day tracking down clews which threw more light on the missing man's background, but which failed to lessen the thickness of the mystery.

The key witness in the case, a woman registered on the boats as Mrs. R. L. Loper, was missing yesterday. Detectives are satisfied that she has knowledge of use to them in regard to what went on in the tiny 6 feet by 10 stateroom adjoining hers.

Come as Surprise.

The above-listed new developments came as complete surprise, and were the result of close questioning of boat men and Keene's wife and son here at their home at the Fairfax Hotel.

It had been previously stated by the boat crew that no one aboard the ship the night of Keene's midnight disappearance had seen him or taken any particular notice of any passenger.

Detectives J. J. Cassidy and Marlin Brubaker, of the Maryland State force, interrogated crew and officers on the way to the Capital from Norfolk, where they opened their investigation the day before.

The news-stand operator on the boat, J. M. Eby, revealed that "the man in the beret" bought a Coca-Cola from him at 8 o'clock, returned to buy another at 9 o'clock and returned a third time. The circumstances of his third visit were "very peculiar," detectives said.

An unidentified man walked up to the refreshment stand and ordered a bottle of beer. A moment behind him came Keene, dressed in long tan topcoat and wearing a brown beret. Without exchanging a word, the stranger turned to Keene, handed him the beer and again faced Eby.

This time the stranger ordered a Coca-Cola. Eby did not notice the second man's clothes or features. He turned his back to get the soft drink, handed it to him, and the man walked aft toward Keene's stateroom, about 30 feet away. Keene remained and finished the bottle of beer, when he, too, walked aft.

William Bowen, night watchman, remembered having seen Keene twice during the night, once on the forward deck, when he was chatting with a man, and later in the salon, when he was talking with another man.

T. J. Shannon, purser, disclosed that instead of never having seen Keene, he had actually seen him in the salon, seated on a divan talking to some second man. Neither Shannon nor Bowen could recall any of the features of the person to whom Keene was talking.

Working with the Maryland police, who have assumed jurisdiction in the case, were Detective Jeremiah Flaherty and Precinct Detective H. Carver, of Washington.

The four brought a gripful of Keene's effects, recovered in his blood-stained cabin at Norfolk, to show to the family here. Mrs. Clemence Keene first revealed that many of the articles did not belong to her husband, including the gloves, letter purse and chamois pouch.

The two Baltimore detectives, armed with these new clews, returned to Baltimore last night to coordinate their findings and confer with criminologists at State police headquarters there. They will go back to Norfolk today, and will come to Washington again tomorrow to attend the hearings to be conducted by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation in the Labor Department at 10 a. m. The hearing, originally scheduled for Baltimore, was transferred to Washington yesterday.

Mrs. Keene yesterday disclosed that it was her husband's custom to sleep in an upper berth with his clothes on whenever he traveled, merely removing his coat and shoes. This still would not account for his beret being missing. Detectives could not understand how he could have been in a scuffle with an assailant and have his spectacles and wristwatch broken, yet still have his beret on. A weak, delicate man, he had not the strength to break the metal strap.

The chamois pouch was tentatively accounted for on the theory that Keene might have used it to carry jewels in. He had several times attempted to sell gems for Charles Osborne, in whose jewel office in the Union Trust Building he had desk space. However, the son said that in the past his father had transported gems in his vest pocket and had no pouch.

A month ago Keene had a large unset pearl in his pocket. Before that he carried a huge ruby set in diamonds, valued at $25,000. He has had gems and precious stones of varying values on his person numerous times.

The leather letter-purse, stitched on two sides and open on two sides, had never been seen by relatives or business acquaintances. It was old and well worn and slightly torn on one corner. It bore no initials and was empty. Whether it was Keene's or someone else's, detectives were trying to find out.

Mrs. Keene said her husband never owned a pair of glace gloves in his life and had a dislike for the shiny type of glove. The gloves found were brand new, and lay as flat as if they had just come out of a store. Any one of the three objects may prove to be a vital clew.

Meanwhile a continuous search for the missing man's body by the Coast Guard in the lower Potomac has failed to produce results. Officers were yesterday speculating on the possibility that it had been washed out to sea and may never be found.

Dickens' Story Helps Win Annulment adds to his first lie a still more dangerous one."

The newspaper urged the bishops of Cologne, Freiburg, Muenster and Ermland to publicly condemn immorality among Catholic priests and monks, a number of whome have been convicted in German courts in recent weeks.

If the bishops do not publicly condemn such immoralities, Der Angriff said, any "further attack on Germany by high church dignitaries will be charged to their account."

"When will the church speak?" the newspaper asked. 'We hold the church responsible if a new anti-German campaign is launched abroad. Will the Holy See allow the Archbishop of Chicago to abuse Germany with impunity? This is our most urgent question?"

Mundelein Wins Support.

Vatican City, May 19 (AP).—Vatican churchmen said tonight that George Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago, had every right to speak his mind in his address Tuesday in which he referred to Adolf Hitler as "an Austrian paperhanger."

They said the Vatican would not concern itself with the Cardinal's speech, either to defend or repudiate it.

The Cardinal had every right to voice his opinion as head of an archdiocese without consulting the Holy See, churchmen asserted.

The Vatican attitude toward Germany and Hitler, they added, was set forth fully in Pope Pius' March 20, encyclical which charged Nazi violation of the German-Vatican concordat and held that German Catholics were being deprived of the right to control religious education of their youth.

Cardinal Mundelein's speech criticized Hitler's attitude toward the church and termed recent trials of German Monks and lay brothers on immorality charges worse than World War "atrocity tales."

Prelates said the Vatican was unaware of the nature of the Cardinal's remarks until informed by newspapermen today and that no official protests was received from Germany.

Wins Episcopal Support.

Chicago, May 19 (AP).—An Episcopal bishop lent his support tonight to George Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago, whose condemnation of Nazi attacks on the Catholic Church in Germany reverberated today in Berlin and Rome.

Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Chicago Diocese said he felt the Catholic prelate was "entirely within his rights" in speaking as he did.

"I have long felt that the Roman Catholic Church has not been treated fairly in Germany," Bishop Stewart said. "Religious freedom is a precious thing. The German people are a religious people and the Roman Catholics of Germany have always adhered to high-minded Christian principles.

"I have been distressed by the widespread charges leveled at the Catholic clergy by the German government, and I am glad that the charges have finally been challenged."

Howard Gould Weds.

Vienna, May 19 (AP).—The marriage of Howard Gould, third son of the late Jay Gould, to Margarete Moshiem, a German actress, became known here today. Gould and his bride, both of whom had been married previously, were wed at Klagenfurt last Saturday.

After Ten Years.

Ten years ago today Charles Lindbergh took off on his great flight across the Atlantic. The impulse is to look for an anniversary celebration of this notable demonstration of aeronautic skill and personal courage. But there is none, probably due mainly to the intense disdain for show which has been the man's attitude since the moment he landed at Le Bourget.

True, an observance had been planned. An air race from Paris to New York had been proposed—a somewhat curious means of commemorating the event. But the Department of Commerce very sensibly discouraged the affair. Some protests against this attitude have been heard, but only in quarters where romantic ideas of aviation seem to prevail. The more sober-minded are pleased that no further lives are to be risked in a totally unnecessary experiment. And the air industry is congratulating itself upon the fact that foolproof rather than foolhardy aspects of flying will be stressed on this occasion.

Ten years ago, following his historic trip, Col. Lindbergh ventured the guess that within a decade flights across the Atlantic would be commonplace. His vision has been well sustained, for Dick Merrill, who last week made a round-trip to England by air, would scarcely have received more than passing notice had his flight not been incident to the coronation services. Moreover, plans for regular transatlantic service are now nearing fruition; the Pacific has already been spanned, at least for scheduled mail delivery; and the whole continent is crisscrossed daily by passenger and freight transports. Plainly, flying has advanced tremendously in ten years.

This remarkable growth has been achieved, however, at a high price. Disasters, costly in life and property, stud the chart of aviation's gains. Happily, attention now can be, and today is being, turned from the strictly mechanical problems of flying to regulation and ground control which seem to have been largely responsible for many recent accidents. Another extremely bitter result of aviation's progress is seen in the perverted uses to which flying has been put. The smoking ruins of Guernica in Spain give an example of this perversion.

A Green Light For ADA.

Justice Wheat's decision that the Alley Dwelling Authority has full power to condemn land for the elimination of insanitary alley hovels opens the way for a more vigorous attack upon Washington's slums. Ever since the ADA began to take over alley property it has been hampered by the uncertainty of its condemnation powers. If it had lost this important test case, the entire program of reclaiming the District's most seriously blighted areas might have been disrupted.

Some property owners have been willing to sell their holdings in inhabited alleys at reasonable prices for the sake of improving conditions that are a menace to the community. Others have not been willing to co-operate. Members of the latter group are now put on notice that if they fail to agree with the authority on a sale price for alley slums they will have to accept whatever can be obtained through condemnation proceedings.

The controversy centered in the question as to whether this land was being taken for public use. Representatives of the owner pointed out that after acquiring the property the ADA might resell it to private individuals for various purposes. Hence, it was argued, the property was being taken for private use.

This line of reasoning overlooks the primary purposes of the ADA. It was not set up to transfer property from one individual to another, but to rid the District of conditions that menace the public health, safety, morals and welfare of local residents. Congress recognized our alley slums as a dangerous source of disease, crime and poverty. Surely Congress, which holds complete legislative authority over the District, has power to deal with these issues, even to the extent of condemning private property.

Experience has proved that the city cannot be relieved of the destructive influence of unsafe and insanitary housing unless the right of condemnation is lodged in a centralized body authorized to take over and redevelop blighted areas. That task was assigned to the ADA only after numerous efforts to handle the problem by regulation had failed.

To date the activities of this agency have won the praise as well as the confidence of the community. It is carrying out one of the few genuine slum-reclamation programs in the country. Thousands of Washingtonians, as well as many others who are interested in housing as a national problem, will be pleased to learn that the authority may now forge ahead as rapidly as cautious planning and limited funds will permit.

Undermining The HOLC.

An organization known as the United Home Owners Liberty Corporation has launched a drive for a moratorium on HOLC foreclosures. Senator Copeland, who spoke over the radio last night in support of this campaign, has introduced a bill to suspend HOLC foreclosures indefinitely, extend the life of HOLC mortgages, drastically reduce interest rates and eliminate deficiency judgments.

This inopportune agitation arises after the emergency that led to the creation of the HOLC is well past its acute stage. It illustrates the political obstacles encountered by any government lending agency when it attempts to follow sound business practices in collecting from debtors. Critics of the HOLC make much of the fact that it has acquired by foreclosure over 30,000 mortgaged homes. But they fail to note that this total is modest considering the circumstances under which the loans were made and the large number of HOLC beneficiaries, now totaling over 1,000,000.

It is also forgotten that the HOLC must account for the disposition of funds obtained for its use by sale of bonds guaranteed as to principal and interest by the Federal Government. To prevent these contingent liabilities from becoming a charge upon the taxpayer, the HOLC must collect the amounts due from borrowers and cut losses on uncollectible items to the minimum consistent with reasonably liberal treatment.

Obviously a ruthless foreclosure policy that made no allowance for special circumstances excusing defaults would be shortsighted. But a flabby policy, permitting delinquents to remain undisturbed in their homes after it had become plain that they either could not or would not meet their obligations, would be equally stupid. It would, in fact, encourage delinquency, leading borrowers to regard funds advanced by the HOLC as concealed gifts.

It is the policy of the HOLC to give borrowers the benefit of the doubt in cases of default. Foreclosure is not pressed until ample time has been devoted to a preliminary investigation. If the debtor is honest and if reasonable adjustments can be made, delinquent borrowers are not dispossessed, but are given every possible chance to retain their homes. The percentage of borrowers who have met all payments is gratifyingly high. Moreover, the trend of delinquencies has been steadily downward since last August.

Under these conditions, there is every reason to conclude that the emergency which justified the creation of the HOLC has passed. There is no need to extend its refinancing activities or to liberalize the conditions under which loans have been made. Homeowners are in a position to obtain assistance on reasonable terms through private agencies if they are trustworthy and if their financial standing warrants it.

The Government has not accepted an obligation to provide homes for people who cannot afford to own them. Borrowers from the HOLC are already a favored group. There is no valid excuse to give them additional concessions.

It is most unfortunate that Senator Copeland has taken up the cause of alarmists who profess to believe that the homes and savings of a majority of HOLC beneficiaries are jeopardized. Neither the record nor the announced intentions of responsible HOLC officials warrant any such extravagant conjectures.

The Franco-Russian Alliance.

The communique issued after the exchange of views in Paris between Maxim Litvinoff, Russia's foreign commissar, on the one hand, and Premier Blum and Foreign Minister Delbos of France, on the other, should end all doubt as to where the two nations stand in their relations with one another.

For some time France has been under very considerable direct and indirect pressure to shelve or scrap its alliance with the Soviet Union. Anathema to a large section of the Rightists in France itself, this alliance has been viewed with unconcealed hostility by the Third Reich and, to a lesser but nonetheless considerable extent, by Italy, Poland, Belgium and Yugoslavia.

Indeed, in all the protracted and thus far fruitless negotiations for revival of the Locarno system of security in western Europe, Germany has unfailingly argued that nothing could be done along that line unless and until the Paris government severed its tie with Moscow. Similarly, the trial balloons launched from time to time by Mussolini for a four-power arrangement to stabilize peace in Europe, has clearly indicated a determination to force the scrapping of the Franco-Russian alliance.

The final result of all these efforts now stands revealed as wholly negative. The Paris and Moscow governments have reaffirmed their loyalty to the Franco-Russian pact, and their continued belief in the principle of the indivisibility of peace. In other words, any effort by Germany, or by a German-Italian combination, to win a free hand for the Third Reich in eastern Europe by the offer to France of a west European peace arrangement is doomed.

What is also implicit in the Paris communique is that the solidarity of France and Russia has the tacit approval of Great Britain. Although the British would no doubt be the first to deny it, this means that the pre-war Triple Entente is again to be reckoned with as a factor in European diplomacy. And in contrast with such a combination the Italo-German bloc, for all the exchange of visits between statesmen of the two Fascist powers, is much less impressive than it was at one time believed to be.

Reviving A Dead Issue.

The Florida ship canal project is again to the fore. It is reported that the measure may be brought forward in a separate bill by the House Rivers and Harbors Committee. The chief controversy over this much debated project no longer revolves about its desirability from a geologic viewpoint or its commercial value when completed. Differences of opinion on these questions still appear to be irreconcilable. But even if it were generally agreed that the canal might in the course of time, directly or indirectly, pay for the cost of its construction, the budgetary position does not now permit large current outlays that would not yield returns for many years.

Those who would like to avoid budgetary complications by authorizing continuance of the work without providing funds for financing it are especially irresponsible. President Roosevelt said in his recent message reviewing the budgetary position: "The maintenance of a sound fiscal policy requires the careful planning of authorizations as well as appropriations. It is impossible to maintain the proper balance between revenues and expenditures unless restraint is exercised with respect to authorizations of appropriations." This is sound advice which the ship canal advocates would do well to heed.

If Congress had had an opportunity to consider the probable cost of this project in the first place and had been asked to appropriate a specific sum for the undertaking, it is doubtful whether a spadeful of earth would ever have been turned. It was the President himself who disregarded the principles of sound budgetary procedure by allocating a small amount of relief funds to a project whose completion would necessitate large and continuous outlays for a good many years.

The successful fight in the Senate to kill this costly project which Congress had never authorized was a notable victory. It ought to have sealed the fate of an undertaking launched in irregular fashion without adequate consideration on its merits. If the measure is reported out of committee at the present session, however, Congress will have still more compelling reasons to reject it.

Death On The Norfolk Boat.

Nature, said Oscar Wilde, imitates art.

The disappearance from the Norfolk boat last Thursday night of a prominent Washington real estate broker clearly calls for the intervention of a Sherlock Holmes, a Monsieur Poirot or a Charley Chan. The circumstances surrounding the tragedy are of the kind that have mystified millions of detective story addicts. Motives for any crime are utterly obscure and the clues that have been turned up are as bewilderingly unrelated and provocative as any to be found in the most exciting opening chapter.

There are the tell-tale spots of blood in the stateroom and on the deck; a bed that had not been slept in; a shot heard in the dead of night by a watchman, who apparently made no attempt to investigate; a five-cent piece on the rug and no body.

All these items cry for the application to the mysterious fatality of all those devices of detection so assiduously and so triumphantly practiced by between-the-covers sleuths. And the presence of one of these puissant minds is all the more needed in view of the fact that precious days have been wasted determining which of several authorities has jurisdiction in the case.

In mystery tales the mystery is always cleared up in the end. Reality does not show that final dovetailing of all the bits of evidence that one finds in detective stories. More than one crime goes undetected and of those solved luck rather than astuteness and scientific skill not infrequently plays a dominant part.

It is to be hoped that the mystery of the missing Washington realtor will soon be wholly clarified. But whether or no, a parallel of the mystery will probably soon find itself between covers, with some ingenious explanation. Art, Oscar Wilde to the contrary notwithstanding, imitates nature.

Reassuring Dr. Eckener.

To mitigate his intense personal anguish over the disaster to the Hindenburg, announcement has been made that Dr. Hugo Eckener will receive the Guggenheim medal for 1937. It is awarded annually in recognition of meritorious achievements in the furtherance of aeronautics. The actual ceremony of bestowal will not be held until December, and ordinarily the identity of the recipient is not revealed beforehand. In disclosing it this year at this early date, the Guggenheim Fund officers show a sympathetic attitude which is thoroughly commendable.

It has been made known that the venerable German Zeppelin expert had been selected for the award before the destruction of his greatest dirigible. Nor should the tragedy have affected this decision. For, despite the Hindenburg's failure, it is as yet far from certain that it was due to anything but cruel misfortune. Dr. Eckener's genius is not impugned. He stands today beyond question the world's greatest authority on lighter-than-air craft. As such he is fully worthy of this high award.

"Glaring Omission."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the tumult over the building of the Jefferson Memorial on the Tidal Basin site has subsided somewhat, I would like to ask why so many apparently public-spirited citizens are so acquiescent over the building of an avowedly national memorial in the Black Hills of South Dakota commemorating a particular period in American history by immortalizing four men—Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt, but excluding America's greatest woman, Susan B. Anthony, a third great emancipator.

In the effort to secure recognition for her one hears the all-too-readily-accepted objection, "This memorial is to include the figures of four Presidents, and Susan B. Anthony was not a President." The greatest achievements for which Washington and Jefferson are being honored were accomplished before either was elected President. Therefore it is unjust to exclude our great woman on that basis, since it is only a half truth at best. Merely being President does not insure greatness.

Mr. Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor who conceived the plan, stated that he wished to record "the great things we accomplished as a Nation," and gave out to the press the following: "Let us place there, carved high, as close to heaven as we can, the words of our leaders, their faces, to show posterity what manner of men they were."

Will the President of these United States, whose duty it is to watch the trend of national affairs, countenance this "glaring omission," as it was characterized by the president of one of our large national women's organizations? Will he not use his great influence to help make this national memorial truly democratic, a symbol of a true republic?

Temporary Employes' Work.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am much in sympathy with C. J. B. and his plea for the temporary Government employes in danger of being dismissed shortly.

I have closely observed the utter inefficiency and laziness of many civil service workers, who take an attitude that they can do as little work as possible because their jobs are secure. In several departments I have watched how the temporary employes, practically all a higher type and more efficient, had to do the hard work while Civil Service workers were biting their finger nails or smoking cigarettes in the rest rooms. Work which they had considered unpleasant or too strenuous had been piled up for months, in one instance for years, for a patient and efficient temporary employe to accomplish.

What is urgently needed is a thorough cleaning up in Government offices. Let the efficient, willing and loyal worker do the work—Civil Service or no Civil Service. It would save Uncle Sam a lot of money, as he could do with about half the amount of employes. It would also eliminate justified public criticism. Where is justice and equal rights for all preached by Mr. Roosevelt if such unfairness prevails right under his nose?

AN OBSERVER.

Public Opinion Poll.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Nation-wide poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion, which appears in The Post every Sunday, is another subtle method through which Wall street seeks to influence the Congress to pass laws in its favor.

The poll conducted by the "Institute" does not reflect the public conscience, but that of the U. S. Chamber of Congress, the National Association of Manufacturers, the Liberty League, etc. I possess official replies of 14 different labor unions in 14 cities. These inform me that out of the total of 29,000 of their workers, only 137 have received the ballots of the "Institute." Of these only 49 voted. These replies convince me that the majority, the disinterested, are carefully avoided in the distribution of ballots.

No wonder we have seen all reactionary proposals triumph and all progressive ones defeated by this piece of Wall street's artifice. It is an insult to the American people to call it the "public opinion." It should rightfully be called "the Wall street's opinion."

For The Red Rider.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: According to a news item in The Post of May 15 the Senate and House conferees in charge of H. R. 148, which regards the proposed repeal of the so-called Red Rider forbidding the advocacy of communism in the schools of this city have practically agreed to recommend the repeal with the proviso that nothing in this action of Congress shall be construed as advocating communism.

May I have a little of your space to tell what I think such action of Congress would mean?

First of all, the protest contained in the proviso is wholly unnecessary; for the public takes it for granted that no member of our Congress could possibly advocate communism directly or indirectly since all are bound by a solemn oath to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States against Communist U. S. S. R., and all other subversive influence and propaganda. And, by the way, do Congressmen, judges and other public servants consider it an insult or a reflection on their loyalty to be obliged to take that oath? Why, then, should teachers (or the radicals who presume to speak for them) feel it an insult to be required to take a loyalty oath? Moreover, in the present controversy there is no question of exacting an oath.

In the next place, if the law is repealed, how can the protest of loyalty of Congress expressed by the proviso restrain school superintendents and school boards from permitting (not to say authorizing) teachers to advocate communism? Is it not rather the duty of Congress charged with the supervision and regulation of the schools of our city, to retain this law?

Two weeks ago floaters were scattered over the city to advertise the meeting to be held by the Communists in Franklin Park. In these leaflets there was a clear call by the Communist Party to work for the repeal of the same Red Rider. Is Congress going to line up with these militant forces of revolution and anarchy and against our unprotected youth in our schools?

Re-Enlistment Allowances.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, last week helped put over a $112,000,000 Congressional appropriation to build another dam somewhere down South, where $112,000, probably $112, would look like a whale of kale!

But to the bill Senator Byrnes added a rider, explained by him as having no unusual significance. It turns out now to be an "economy rider!" It denies to soldiers, sailors, marines and others the re-enlistment allowance which until the New Deal took over was part of a regular's service pay!

Maybe there are many Republicans and Democrats who can reconcile the action of voting $112,000,000 for a project that the country could leave alone at this time of financial stress and with the same voting deny to our regular Army and Navy men the small pittance that has been given them for staying with the colors! Frankly, this writer, a Democrat, can't. Soldiers don't vote.

HAROLD GREGORY.
Washington, May 18.

Favoring D. S. T.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is nothing very strange about so few Government people not attending hearings on daylight saving time, although it is easily ascertainable that the vast preponderence of them favor it.

For them to attend such hearings means loss of money—the Government does not excuse them for such absence. As a result they are leaving John do their talking and unfortunately John is not able to appear either.

A word of warning to daylight saving advocates who feel their case is so conclusive that they need make no fight. This matter was won by regular timers, after a summer's trial years ago because Government workers remained inactive. Nearby farmers and business enterprises do not favor the project and the noise the farmers made crowded out the majority.

Daylight saving time is a fine thing for Government workers—we should have it—but the only way we will get it is by going after it—to Congress.

HARRY HENSHAW.
Washington, May 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The daylight saving schedule will benefit the thousands of clerks and other workers whose hours are long and rather late. With the exception of Government workers and housewives most every one will welcome its adoption. It is a city problem and not a rural one and consequently the city dweller is the one to be considered. If we cannot have shorter hours, we should at least have one hour more daylight for those whose hours are usually from 8:30 to 6 p. m. There is only one way to do this practically and that is by turning the clock forward.

If it means some inconvenience to housewives and a few others who regulate their own time it would be a miserable excuse to give such as a reason for denying the great number of workers who toil from early morning till night that one hour of daylight.

A STORE CLERK.

The Voice Of Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From time immemorial, even from that dim and misty period of approximations when home sapiens emerged an organic being, mankind has shown an active and a vital concern in finding ways and means of separating the sheep from the goats. This concern is worthy, logical, universal. It is part and parcel of the truth we all seek; of the vision of a far-off, divine event to which the whole creation moves. Man early learned that he could not serve two masters at one and the same time; that his fortune being to the right, he must avoid the inviting ways that would lead him to the left.

The leaven of reform is probably the most vital product of his genius. It entered the Garden of Eden and marched forward to produce the tables of the law on Mount Sinai. It moved into the courts of Greece and Rome. It functioned in Magna Charta and flowered forth in the American Revolution. Its spirit was the foster parent and guarantor of victory in our Civil War.

It came upon evil days in the first quarter of this century. Today, in the voice of Westbrook Pegler, it speaks out again. He is earnest. He is informed. He is a keen observer, a man of the people with opinions and a will. His pen supplies a long felt want.

What this country needs is more Peglers and fewer goats.

Domestic Dynamite.

IT was Mrs. Arabella Mixing's time to entertain and, and after dinner, hostess and guests had listened to the radio.

When Capt. Ebenezer Longbow made the remark he did, Casual Smith and Demosthenes McGinnis never batted an eye, for they knew he frequently said more than he meant; but their wives gave instant attention, for they suspected he meant more than he said.

"If and when I marry again," said the captain, "I'm going to establish an eight-hour day for my wife and pay her a salary."

This, as you know, was not an original thought with him. He was quoting High Authority and giving it a seeming approval.

Mrs. Mixing nodded and smiled. "Meaning," she said, "in your own contradictory way that you don't agree with the lady. Well, neither do I."

Casual Smith settled himself to listen. "Proceed," said he.

Far be it from me (said Mrs. Mixing) to find fault with the economies of a lady who has more time for that kind of thing than I have. The most I can find time for is to wrestle with domestic economies, and I haven't any husband to pay me for going to the mat with them.

And I'm not saying she is wrong. She may be gazing clear-eyed at the truth while the rest of the world is cock-eyed and can't see it. Truth is sometimes blinding. But at the moment it seems to my poor way of thinking that a married woman's status would be definitely lowered if she took a salary from her husband. She would become a hired hand instead of a partner. You can't share a man's joys and sorrows on an eight-hour schedule. It requires 24 hours a day, and the salary is love and trust and a hope that's shared. When these things are missing there is no arrangement of wage and time that will improve matters.

For the domestic servant the schedule may be all right; that remains to be proved; but it is no good for the wife and mother. You can't watch the clock and watch the baby.

The only union possible in the home has just two members; with as many blessings on the side as a kind Providence provides.

The union, naturally, is not always perfect. I have known a sit-down strike that has had disastrous results. The sit-down striker was demonstrating that in some cases the reason a woman's work was never done was because she wouldn't do it. She lost the strike and now gets alimony. This, if you don't look into it too closely, proves the equality of the sexes.

Even suppose it were possible to work out a time schedule, where is the salary to come from? Let us take three fairly typical cases, John Smith, John Doe and John Brown.

John Smith has a small wage when he has work and turns it all over to his wife, less the price of his smokes. In flush times he'll have a drink or two. He may play a game of bowls or a game of pool. Once in a while he and his wife go to the movies. An eight-hour schedule wouldn't do the wife any good. The work in the house has to be done and there is nobody else to do it.

John Doe has a bigger salary and a higher grade of living. He and his wife have a budget and they go over expenses together. He pays the rent and insurance. He pays for the light, heat and telephone. She buys the food and other household supplies. She pays the laundress and the occasional maid. They confer together before spending money on clothing, theaters, books and incidentals and they put a little aside for emergencies. Working on a schedule would be here impossible, and talk of a salary would be unnecessary bookkeeping.

When you take the case of John Brown, who lives on Easy street, the idea of any schedule goes glimmering. Mrs. Brown may do as much or as little work as she wants to. The financial arrangements between husband and wife may or may not be satisfactory, but that is a matter depending wholly on their dispositions. It is certain that a salary here is no more desirable than in the other cases. As a matter of fact it is even more absurd.

Absurd? Yes. But that doesn't mean that something of the kind may not go into effect. When we are properly regimented Uncle Sam will look after us all. And when little Johnny cuts himself there will perhaps be a showdown.

"No, dear," mamma will say, "I cant' tie up your poor little finger. Mamma has already worked eight hours today and anything over that time should be time and half and papa objects to pay it. And if you get lockjaw or something it will be papa's fault."

So papa ties up the cut finger and wonders who is going to pay his time and half, for he has already worked his eight hours in the office.

And the children won't be allowed to help themselves or each other because of the child labor law.

Looks like an impasse, doesn't it? But there is always a way out. The family will hold a conference and the youngest of the children will at last have a bright idea. "Oh, I know what we'll do, mumsy!" she will cry. "We'll send for Mrs. Roosevelt!"

District Income Tax.

A TRAGIC SITUATION has arisen in the National Capital.

The City Fathers anticipate a deficit of $6,000,000 for the coming year, and a local income tax has been proposed. If that plan is adopted those who are privately employed in Washington or engaged in private business there, but live in Maryland or Virginia, may be run over for the third time—which would constitute a new record for this event.

These individuals are now subject to the Federal and State income taxes, and the new District levy would permit them to put up a third wound stripe regardless of the fact that the triple tax might reduce their income below the normal level of eligibility.

The Federal Government, of course, takes first cut, as a matter of courtesy. The State of Maryland or Virginia, as the case may be, then taxes their income, wherever earned, because they are residents of Maryland or Virginia. The proposed District income tax would then be imposed on the ground that their income was derived from Washington.

• • • •

IF THESE TAXES follow the accepted model for State income taxes, then Maryland and Virginia would tax money already paid to the Federal and District treasuries. And the District would tax the money paid the Government and State. This small group thus would become the corps d'elite of the little army of income tax payers who now number only a little more than 2,000,000 in a nation of 120,000,000.

The entire strength of the little army, incidentally, is only about half that of the army of tax-exempt State, county and municipal employes scattered about the country who pay no Federal tax at all and, in 16 of the States, are immune from the State tax as well because there is none.

The Federal employes would seem to be the lucky ones in the present distressing situation. As agents of the national Government they are immune from the State tax in Maryland or Virginia, if they live outside the District. And the District of Columbia probably will be recognized as an independent subdivision, too, and thus forbidden to tax Federal hands living in the Capital. Thus they would pay one tax where others may pay three.

A District income tax would be a great scourge to many socially refined dowagers, wealthy divorcees and lobbyists who settled in Washington to enjoy the peculiar atmosphere and, incidentally, escape State income taxes in New York and other States among the 32 which have adopted this method of persecution. Washington has been a happy little free State, but if freedom no longer rings the nearest refuge will be Pennsylvania or New Jersey on the north or Florida on the south.

• • • •

THE FREE TERRITORY is diminishing rapidly, although it must be noted that the 16 States which have no income tax also are the citadels of great fortunes and may be able to hold out indefinitely. The list, as of last August, consists of Connecticut, New Jersey, Maine, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Texas, Colorado, Nebraska, Wyoming, Michigan, Nevada and Washington.

Connecticut, Florida, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have large and luxurious camps of State income tax refugees, but, like White Russians in the days of the Terror, they live in great anxiety, not knowing when they may be overwhelmed. Connecticut and Florida have trifled with the idea of a State income tax this year, and Florida even considered a stout estate tax to the horror of the huddling fugitives in Palm Beach, Miami Beach and the West Coast. The peril, fortunately, has passed for the time being, but the long hour of dread was a horrible ordeal.

It may be shocking information, but good authority reports that, next to the high-priced judges, school teachers and political appointees in New York and a few other rich States, the most dogged exemptees under the Federal income tax are prosperous farmers who somehow cannot get the idea that the tax was meant to apply to them.

The farmer with a prosperous place steadily adds to his land, stock and equipment, but does not count this gain as income, because he has other ideas. And because the internal revenue posses concentrate on city people and farmers enjoy a tradition of poverty, the wealthy farmer just keeps on forgetting his dues.

All in favor of taxing the prosperous farmer and the State, county and municipal employes are invited to go roll a hoop.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The East Side Produces a British Knight.

(Louis Sterling, who was knighted by King George coronation week and made Sir Louis Sterling, is, it appears, an old New York East Side boy. He was born on the East Side, of Russian immigrant parents, and worked as a shipping clerk there.—News item.)

There is joy along the East Side,
On the Bowery is delight,
For they've up and made a Ghetto
Lad a bloomin' British knight.

Forty years ago just "Looie"
On the East Side of the town,
He has now been made "Sir Louis"
By decision of the Crown.

Once he played ball in the gutters,
And knew well the "Cheese it! Cops!"
Now he's come into a knighthood—
Which is close to East Side tops.

Irving Berlin soared to glory
For his songs red, hot and blue,
And a certain famous "Schnozzle"
Glorified the East Side, too.

Jimmy Walker climbed the ladder,
Al Smith rose to quite a height,
But no East Side lad but "Looie"
Got to be a British knight.

So it's now Sir Louis Sterling
By decree and royal bid,
But the East Side shouts, as ever,
"Hey, there, Looie! Howza kid?"

Now the Grand street boys are talking
Of a big reunion bust,
With Sir Louis guest of honor,
And his bid to it marked "must."

There'll be present Sir Jim Walker,
And the Duke of Albany—
Sometimes called the Earl of Fulton.
H. R. H. Smith (Alfred E.).

Jim Durante, Count of Schnozzle,
And King Irving Berlin First—
There'll be herring and salami,
"Franks" and kraut and liverwurst.

There'll be statesmen, chiefs and judges,
Merchants, Senators and such,
For it's great stuff when the East Side
Gets a little royal touch.

Princes? Yes, the slums have had 'em,
And produced a number, thanks;
But the East Side throws a party

The Real Rulers Of Italy

Five Industrialists Discerned Behind Mussolini.

By H. J. Wigham.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Milan.

I AM FOR PEACE. How could I be for anything else? We have our empire and we need peace in order to develop it. This was the burden of the conversation I have just had with the Duce. Obviously I cannot quote all that was said that sunny afternoon at the Palazzo Venezia; for Mussolini no more than Franklin Roosevelt or any other person in high office in these days can talk for publication on the spur of the moment. Nevertheless the impression got from personal contact with a man of such forceful character and extraordinary clearness of speech cannot fail to have considerable importance.

I first saw Mussolini about 11 years ago at the Chigi Palace before he moved to his present official headquarters in the Palazzo Venezia. He has aged considerably in those years. The contours of the face are more pronounced as the hair has grown scarce at the temple. But the vitality of the man is just as exuberant as ever. His head goes back in the same rather arrogant fashion; the voice has the same volume and timbre, the white of the eyes glare at you all round the pupils when he thrusts a question at you, and the laughter is spontaneous and gargantuan when he scores a point.

Duce's Talk Found Marked By Frankness.

BOTH THEN and now I found the Duce frank and ready to talk, and not merely to talk, but to express definite opinions on definite subjects. And he seems to welcome frankness on the part of the person who has come to see him. He knew, of course, that he had a pretty bad press in America which worries him a good deal and asked me to explain the reason. I told him there were two reasons. First, a large section of the American press thought he broke the peace when he went into Abyssinia; secondly, the same section thought he was probably going to break it again. Then he launched forth into an emphatic statement of his peaceful intentions and the reasons for them.

Those who discount or belittle these professions, and there are plenty such to be found in the democratic countries, are themselves doing little to help the cause of peace; for their disbelief is based on an ignorance of Mussolini's character and a failure to look with understanding at the various factors in world affairs which are making for peace or war.

You cannot spend 20 minutes discussing peace and war with Mussolini without being convinced that he wants nothing in the world so much as peace. For the only conceivable European war at this time is a war instigated by Germany and waged by Germany in combination with her Fascist friends to give Germany her colonies, her markets, her place in the sun. Mussolini is much too intelligent to believe that Italy can profit by such a war. Much more likely is Italy to lose her quickly won empire. And much more likely is Mussolini and his regime to perish in the storm.

WHY in the world, then, does not Mussolini work for peace? Why does he not use the same gift of leadership which enabled him to prepare his campaign in Africa as no colonial campaign was ever before, to prepare the world for peace? For surely to wage peace needs just as great intelligence and powers of organization as to wage war.

The answer is difficult. There are, in fact, several answers. It is rather absurd to talk about preparing for peace when every nation, and especially Italy, is so obviously preparing for war. Mussolini had to admit that disarmanent was out of the question at present. To begin with, any serious curtailment of war preparations would bring about a terrific crash on the world exchanges. So, terrible as it may seem, the work of building war machines has to go on if only to save the bulls of the world's stock markets.

Also, to take a slightly more humane view, the sudden increase of unemployment would be appalling. This is particularly true of Italy. The prosperity of northern Italy which leaps to the eyes with the stupendous increase of buildings of all sorts around Milan and other manufacturing towns is based about 90 per cent on war work. To curtail this work would produce a prompt panic.

So even a dictator may not be able to control events within his own country. And least of all Mussolini. For, although the Fascist revolution was largely created by Mussolini and was carried to fruition by his amazing energy, and while the great spectacular deeds of the regime are largely Mussolini's in conception and mainly his execution, the day-to-day functioning of the regime depends on forces over which Mussolini has very little control. And as the time for spectacular deeds draws to a close and consolidation of gains is the order of the day the true powers behind Mussolini tend more and more to disclose themselves.

BENITO MUSSOLINI.

Fascist Regime Seen In No Danger of Collapse.

BE SURE OF THIS: The Fascist regime is in no danger of collapse. On the contrary, it is probably stronger today than at any time in its history. Barring a European war a collapse is quite outside the bounds of probability. For the regime depends far less on the life of Mussolini now than at any time in the past. The real power in Italy does not reside in the Palazzo Venezia so much is in Milan and Turin. And the men who wield it are quite capable of building up a Balbo or a Ciano just as they are forever building up Mussolini. And you may be sure that either one or the other would be found willing.

Without Italy's industrial Big Five or Big Seven, the Fascist regime could not exist for a moment. And therefore if one should ask the question why does not Mussolini, who honestly and truly wants peace, prepare for it and pursue it with all the magnificent energy that he has displayed in the past. The answer is, "Ask Milan."

Mussolini must know, he is much too intelligent not to know, that the inspired and censored press of Italy with its constant attacks on England and France cannot possibly be a factor working for peace. But can he stop the press attacks? It would be necessary to discover first who owns the press.

Does he himself believe that England and France are his enemies? He seemed doubtful on that point. He absolves America of ulterior motives but he is sure of England. If England wants peace why doesn't she come out and say so, and acknowledge the conquest of Abyssinia and stop inviting Haile Selassie to state functions? I am sure Mussolini quite honestly feels that England's position is equivocal. She may be plotting to deprive him of his empire.

But who fills him with such ideas? Remember that even a dictator cannot read all the foreign papers every day. He actually reads what is put before him. And who makes the selection for him? There's the rub. One comes away from Italy with a strong feeling that the Duce, in spite of his enormous intelligence, is allowing himself to be exalted to heaven before his time. And all the "A Noi Duce" and "Viva Duce" business, and the constant parades in the Palazzo Venezia, and the wielding of the first pick at this great building operation or that, is all part of a general plan by the Milan industrialists, who are the real power behind the throne in Italian journalism, to keep the great man busy and exalted while the business of running the country is gathered into other equally resolute hands.

Northern Millionaires Virtually Control Italy.

IF THE NORTHERN millionaires do not control Italy today they certainly will tomorrow. Agnelli Donegani, Pirelli, Motta, Count Volpi di Misurata, these are the five that already dictate the economic policy of Italy. There are others, of course. These five dominate steel, chemicals, mining, rubber and electricity. Textiles, including cotton, silk, rayon, and wool are important also. We might add the name of Count Ciano, father of the present minister for foreign affairs, Mussolini's son-in-law.

The big industrialists have always been behind Mussolini. And why not? Was not the March on Rome the end of a Bolshevist nightmare? A few of the captains of industry may think they could have weathered the storm without any help from Mussolini. But in the main they have followed his star and have been perfectly willing to stay in the shade while he waved the banner. But I am very far from maintaining that industrialism and fascism in Italy mean the same thing. Milan has been very cold in the past to many big items of Mussolini's policy. Two years ago you could hardly have found any enthusiasm north of the Apennines for the Abyssinian adventure. And even now if any of the Big Five were to speak his mind freely he would probably say that Mussolini had far more luck than he deserved.

They know that Mussolini has no great aptitude for finance or economics and is as likely as not to go wrong if he is not steered in the right direction. Witness his initial error 11 years ago in stabilizing the lira too high when he made it 5.40 (cents) just to show that it was worth more than the French franc, stabilized at 3.92. And witness his second error in sticking to his original fault. These two mistakes cost Italy far more than sanctions, for they thoroughly depressed the once lucrative tourist traffic for a period of ten years and also put a check on remittances from Italians abroad, next to the tourist traffic Italy's best bet.

The big millionaires have no illusions about fascism. You cannot quite visualize Agnelli or Donegani grabbing a black shirt and shouting the Fascist slogans. These men are realists, as hard-bitten as any in the world, and they know precisely how much the success of Mussolini means to them and will continue to mean. But from now on, as they pay the piper, they are going to call the tune.

Ethiopian Campaign Brought Abrupt Change.

THE CHANGE has come rapidly since Italy marched into Abyssinia. Mussolini could not have possibly pulled off his big coup without the thorough co-operation of the industrialists. Whether they approved the policy or not, they certainly backed it to the limit. And they showed what Italy could do in the way of manufacturing and chemical enterprise to make up for a lack of raw materials intensified by sanctions.

The record of 1936 is most impressive. Montecatini alone (that great congerie of industries which rivals the Farbenindustrie of Germany) has increased the production of lead 20 per cent, enough to cover all the demands of the home market in 1937. It made a net profit of 170,000,000 lira in 1936. And the profits this year will undoubtedly be greater. A similar story can be told of the cotton, silk and rayon mills, and of the big corporation which distills alcohol from wine, beets, cereals and molasses for use as a substitute for gasoline. At least 20 per cent of the essence used by automobiles is now homemade industrial alcohol. Mention might also be made of the new refineries at Bari, on the Adriatic, Leghorn on the Mediterranean for the conversion of crude oil from Albania.

When one considers that the entire length of the Italian State railroads are either electrified now or will be within the next few months an idea may be had of the importance of the power industry in Italy. The long line from Naples to Via Regio was opened the other day and the only important sections remaining under steam are the line from Milan to Bologna, and from Milan north to Chiasso and to Domodossola. However, the section from Leghorn to Rome still has steam engines so that the Rome express goes by way of Florence. But all the gaps will be filled up in a year or so.

Industry in Italy is booming and can hardly fail to boom still more when the new trade agreements, especially those with Jugoslavia and Rumania, come into play. This sudden access of activity and wealth which so far from being checked by sanctions was actually stimulated by them has had two very important results. First, it has demonstrated the power of the industrialists; and secondly, it has made them more than ever determined to run the show. And January 9 of this year marked the definite handing over of economic power to the northern millionaires.

Italy Said Emerging From Revolution Period.

ITALY, as everyone knows, is a model totalitarian state. Not everyone knows what the phrase means. I am not sure that Mussolini himself could have given a very clear definition two years ago. Probably Mr. Donegani and Senator Agnelli knew all the time. Anyhow the shape of the totalitarian state is now emerging from the confustion of the revolutionary period. Roughly speaking, Italy has abolished representative government as we know it in America and England, and has substituted government by corporations or rather by guilds. There are 22 guilds created by the Fascist Grand Council. And the guilds at first were controlled by a ministerial commission. But on January 9 all power to run the economic business of the country was turned over to the guilds themselves. And the guilds are—Agnelli, Donegani, Pirelli, Volpi, Motta, et al.

It is exactly as if the entire economic control of the United States were turned over to the steel association, the oil group, the duPonts, the woolen association; in other words to Mr. Myron Taylor, Mr. Irenee duPont, Mr. Alfred Sloane and whomever else you might think of as personifying big business. Notice that in Italy small mention is made of banks or railroads or shipping because they are completely in the hands of the government.

Now it is quite time that labor is also represented in the guild and theoretically the representatives of capital and labor sit at board meetings of the guild to decide what is the best policy for everyone. But can you imagine Senator Agnelli or Mr. Donegani paying a great deal of attention to the representatives of labor? Also, if labor has a voice who has heard it? The names of the Big Five are household words in North Italy, and the names of the silk and rayon and woolen manufacturers are common property. But who has ever heard the name of a labor leader? You won't find any mention made of labor individually in all the press of Italy. No. We may be quite sure that the guild means the capitalists. And on January 9 the great capitalist oligarchy of Italy, one of the greatest in the world, came into its own by formal and explicit decree. The Grand Fascist Council on that day examined the work performed in the first two years of the existence of the guilds and found it good. And now the guilds have complete control of all available resources in the several branches of production. In fact, they govern the entire economic life of Italy.

What this means for the peace of the world cannot be answered in a sentence. At least there can be no doubt of the enormous importance for all of us of what happened or rather of what was finally acknowledged on January 9 of this year.

All Economic Controls Given To Guilds On Jan. 9.

In Danubia

By Barnet Nover

THE KEY to peace in the Danube Valley, one of Europe's major trouble spots, is right now to be found in London.

Recent developments in Europe, particularly the efforts that are being made to strengthen the Rome-Berlin axis and Austria's attempt to regain its freedom of movement, have forced Great Britain to reconsider its policy with regard to central Europe.

Hitherto that policy has largely been negative. Great Britain wants to see peace maintained everywhere on the continent. It has never hesitated to give its moral support to any genuine movement for political appeasement in Europe. But, up to now, it has steadfastly refused to commit itself in advance to any program that would require the use of its armed force against any nation or nations endangering the status quo in the Danube area.

It is now reported that Great Britain, in co-operation with France and Russia, has at last agreed to take a strong stand in favor of the maintenance of central European peace.

THIS REPORT is to be taken with a grain of salt, certainly if it is taken to mean, as it would seem to, that Britain will ally itself with those other powers in forcible opposition to any infringement of the territorial integrity of Austria or Czechoslovakia.

Should Germany attempt a military adventure in the direction of either or both of these nations, Great Britain might pursue exactly that course. But it is doubtful in the extreme whether the London government is prepared to agree to such a policy in advance.

Yet, at the same time, there are reasons why, short of any offer of military aid, Great Britain may now be willing to throw in its great weight on the side of the existing status quo in central Europe.

There happens to be an economic instrument which it can wield with no small measure of effectiveness. Great Britain can, if it wants to, aid considerably in stabilizing peace in the Danube area by refraining from exercising its right to block that far-reaching economic rapprochement between the nations of that region. Which is a real possibility for the immediate future.

A FEW YEARS ago the trend in the direction of autarchy—national self-containment—was very strong. Even nations such as Great Britain, the Netherlands, Belgium and the Scandinavian kingdoms which had been noted for their free trade positions, joined the movement for higher tariffs and increasing trade restrictions of other types.

This tendency is now definitely on the decline. The United States which, with its tariff act of 1930, set a very bad example has been for some time setting a very good one with the Hull reciprocal trade agreements. This year has seen the initiation of a movement by Belgium, the Netherlands and the Scandinavian kingdoms to revive the Oslo agreement.

Signed in 1930, that pact pledged the signatories not to boost tariffs against each other. It never went into force. The prevailing tendency in the rest of the world was in the opposite direction and the Oslo states were reluctantly forced to fall into line.

Now these same nations are hopeful they can work out a new agreement to remove trade barriers between themselves. They look to Great Britain for moral and material support. Certainly should Great Britain insist on its most-favored-nation rights, an agreement of that kind could not go into force.

THE DANUBE VALLEY is another spot where an effort to free trade is under way. There the motivation is not only economic but also political. Certainly so far as Austria is concerned, and Austria is the heart of the central European problem, anything that would tend to improve its economic situation would strengthen its political stability.

Italy recognized that fact when the Rome protocols were signed some years ago. But Italy today is in no position to take an increasing quantity of Austrian products. Both as a result of deliberate choice and through the compulsion of necessity, Italy continues to seek autarchy. And as long as it does Austria must look elsewhere for its principal markets.

At the same time, the establishment of the Italo-German diplomatic bloc has frightened the Vienna government. It refuses to become a pawn of the Fascist dictatorships which means, ultimately, of Germany. It is, therefore, seeking to regain that independence of movement it lost when, in 1934, it became the satellite of Italy.

Yet if is recognized in Vienna that Austria, by its own unaided efforts, can get nowhere in the achievement of this laudable ambition. It needs outside support. Hence, concurrent with a certain drawing away from Italy, there has been on the part of Austria a manifestation of desire to draw closer to Czechoslovakia and to form a bloc of independent Danubian states outside the Italo-German orbit.

Recently when President Miklas and Chancellor Schuschnigg of Austria visited Budapest, Admiral Horthy, the Hungarian regent, in his speech of welcome emphasized the importance for Hungary of friendship with Italy and "the mighty German reich."

In his reply, however, President Miklas went out of his way to express Austria's hope that a larger measure of co-operation be realized between all the countries of the Danube area. This idea has met with at least a partially favorable reception in the Hungarian cabinet. But whether it will achieve fruition remains to be seen.

Economically, improved trade relations among the Danube states would be an unmixed boon. For that reason it has a real measure of attraction to Hungary as well as to Austria, Czechoslovakia and Rumania. But it is bound to meet with the opposition of Germany and of Italy. Hence all efforts for even a partial Danubian customs union are certain of failure unless they are powerfully supported by France and by Great Britain.

In the past Great Britain has refused to abandon its most-favored-nation rights under any circumstances. Its stand meant the doom of the Ouchy Convention of July 1932 whereby the Netherlands and Belgium agreed to lower their tariffs on each other's goods by 10 per cent a year. Since Great Britain, for its part, did not hesitate, two years later, to violate the spirit if not the letter of the most-favored-nation principle by establishing a system of imperial preferences, its attitude was clearly one of dog-in-the-manger.

The London government now has an opportunity, by not claiming most-favored-nation rights in the event of the establishment of a regime of freer trade in the Danube Valley, to perform a real service for peace.

As the London Economist recently pointed out: "At no time since 1927 has the lowering of tariff barriers been at once politically more desirable and economically more feasible. If this applies generally it applies with especial force in the Danube area."

Greatest Waltz

By William Lyon Phelps.

"The Blue Danube."

Exactly 70 years ago, in the year 1867, when the composer was 41 years old, the incomparable Blue Danube Waltz, by Johann Strauss the Younger, was performed at Vienna for the first time, with Strauss leading. The full title was "By the Beautiful Blue Danube," and its success was immediate and enormous, and it popularity has, if anything, steadily increased. As a composer of waltzes Johann Strauss, sr., was surpassed only by his son, the author of "Blue Danube," which was his Opus 314.

• • • •

On Saturday night, April 17, 1937, I heard this in Boston, given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time in its regular series of concerts, which have now lasted more than 50 consecutive years. This same great orchestra had played it before, in 1911, in 1915 and in 1934, but on these occasions it was part of the campaign for pension or special funds, and not in the regular dignified series of Friday and Saturday concerts.

Thus this most popular and most beautiful of all waltzes has finally risen from extreme popularity to the distinguished fame of a classical program; other orchestras had previously so honored it.

• • • •

Strauss composed the Danube waltzes to be sung as well as to be played. The first performance had a chorus of 150 male voices. When in 1872 the composer made his appearance in America, the "Blue Danube" was given under his direction by 2,000 players, together with a chorus of 20,000. Strauss said that the terrific noise nearly deafened him.

House District Group Votes To Back Bill Banning Abattoir

Norton Measure Wins Approval Without Debate; Attorney's Plea for Reconsideration Is Beaten; Senate Hearings to End Today.

Congressional action on Washington's abattoir and "nuisance industry" problem sped toward a climax yesterday as the House District Committee approved an abatement bill and a special Senate sub-committee prepared to conclude hearings on a companion measure.

Less than half an hour after its chairman, Representative Mary T. Norton, had submitted her proposed legislation, the House District Committee voted that it be reported favorably.

Meantime, resuming the hearings begun May 11 on Senator William H. King's bill to prevent the Adolf Gobel Co. from building a slaughter house in the District, the McCarran sub-committee heard that project described variously as an economic boon and a public disgrace.

Hearings May Close Today.

The Senate group will hear further arguments for and against the King bill at 1 p. m. today, when the investigation probably will be closed. Mrs. Norton is expected to report her committee-approved bill to the House on Monday, the next "District day."

Skillfully guiding her bill, Chairman Norton received a favorable vote, without discussion, almost before the House committee members had settled in their seats. Taken by surprise at the swift action, D. Edward Clarke, local counsel for Gobel, protested:

"I know you will want to see justice done and I plead with you to reconsider this action until the Senate committee has completed its hearings."

Passage of the bill, he said, would cause his client to suffer a loss in excess of $1,000,000.

Representative Palmisano, of Maryland, thereupon moved a reconsideration of the vote. His motion was defeated, 8 to 7.

Clarke Claims Bills Invalid.

The Maryland Democrat's motion to reconsider followed upon Clark's charge that the anti-nuisance bill, which provides for no compensation to the Gobel company, owner of the Benning road site where it plans to build, is unconstitutional.

Although Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal upheld the constitutionality of the twin bills of Mrs. Norton and Senator King, Representative Dirksen, of Illinois, said they should carry the safeguard of a section compensating the Gobel company, or else separate legislation to this end should be introduced.

In the fifth day of hearings on the King measure, the McCarran subcommittee heard a cattle raiser and an electrical contractor from Prince Georges County, Md., defend the abattoir project and a number of Washington citizens attack it.

The most surprising testimony came from Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, prominent clubwoman, who, while proclaiming her neutrality, inferentially indorsed Gobel's arguments by pointing out the large number of ill-smelling dumps in the National Capital and citing the employment and taxation benefits which the abattoir would bring.

Appearing as president of the Kalorama Citizens Association, the widow of the Federal food and drug pioneer, minimized the Interior Department's aggressiveness in support of the King bill with a reminder that its new building eliminated much taxable property which formerly occupied the site.

Recalled Camp Protest.

She recalled the storm of protest that arose when establishment of a tourist camp in East Potomac Park was proposed, urging the committee to consider Gobel's plans from every aspect before taking action.

The abattoir which was operated on the Benning road site prior to 1933 was practically odorless and was a valuable asset to Prince Georges County stockmen, the committee was told by Clarence M. Roberts, of Landover, Md.

Introduced by Senator Millard E. Tydings, who once served with him in the Maryland Legislature, Roberts testified that county cattle raisers preferred Benning to Baltimore for marketing purposes because it was so much cheaper. Stimulated by Tydings' questions, he said the structure planned by Gobel would ornament rather than mar the vicinity and that practically no foul odor emanated from the old slaughter house when it was in use several years ago.

Roberts, a practing attorney in Washington who turned to farming and cattle breeding exclusively to conserve his health, not only is one of the county's biggest stockmen but also manages the Maryland farm of his London brother-in-law, Lord Fairfax.

He charged that the Washington fish markets smell worse than any abattoir but answered in the negative when Vernon West, assistant corporation counsel, asked if he would care to have a slaughter-house erected near his residence. Roberts left with the committee a petition against the King bill which he circulated in Prince Georges. He said it bears 446 signatures.

Assails River Pollution.

John Riggles, Seabrook, Md., electrical contractor, charged that pollution of the Anacostia River near the District-Maryland border gives rise to far worse odors than the Gobel plant, whose sponsors have guaranteed will be strictly modern and with the latest anti-nuisance equipment.

Other pro-abattoir witnesses heard yesterday were Charles F. A. Longus, colored, and Ivan M. Baker, both of whom live in the immediate vicinity. The former stressed the jobs which would be created. Baker, father of 10 children, represented the Benning Citizens Association which, he said, voted Tuesday night in favor of the abattoir. He estimated 95 per cent of the property owners in the neighborhood feel the same way.

On the other hand, the New York packing firm's program was assailed by Mrs. Helen Fowler, a northeast resident, who told of the smells generated by the plant prior to its suspension of business in 1933; Mrs. C. W. Sheriff, who said it is "a curse that oughten't to be allowed in any city;" Lyman F. Kebler, president of the Columbia Heights Citizens Forum, and Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, secretary of the Forest Hills Citizens Association.

Conferees Support 'Red Rider' Repeal

A conference report recommending repeal of the "red rider" was filed in the House yesterday by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), Maryland. It bore the signatures of all Senate and House conferees.

As agreed last week, the report proposes a compromise proviso, linked with the repeal, stating that the action shall not be construed as "advocating communism."

The report must be acted upon by the Senate first, Kennedy said, and consequently may not be called up in the House until next week. As the compromise has been approved by the sponsors of the "pink rider," it is expected to pass both houses.

U. S. Says Raskob Avoided Tax in '31

New York, May 19 (AP).—On a gross income of $1,199,904.91 for 1931, John J. Raskob, business associate of Pierre S. duPont, paid no tax, the Government showed today as it rested its case on the main issue of a 1929 tax suit against du Pont.

This evidence was introduced after Government counsel had finished a two-day questioning of du Pont from whom it seeks a deficiency but the two obtained a severance of their hearings.

The basis of the suit is an allegation that the two, after the panic of 1929, entered into a series of cross sales of stock by which they established losses of more than $7,000,000 which they deducted from their income taxes.

Federal Agents Sent to Guard Harlan's Labor

Fulfills Promises of Protection After New Complaints.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings yesterday ordered Federal agents into Harlan County, Ky., coal fields to halt alleged intimidation of employes and to make good a Senatorial promise witnesses in the civil liberties investigation would be protected.

The Attorney General acted on complaints filed with him by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin; John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Gov. R. B. Chandler of Kentucky, he said.

"These complaints paint a sordid picture of violence and terrorism in Harlan County," he added. "If the investigation discloses offenses under federal jurisdiction, vigorous and prompt prosecution will follow."

Bargaining Not Involved.

The action was taken under provisions of the labor relations act prohibiting intimidation of employes, and making such threats or injury a Federal offense. Collective bargaining rights are not involved in this investigation, since such complaints must be taken direct to the Labor Board.

"The object of the investigation," the department said, "is to ascertain whether coal operators and other individuals have conspired in violation of Section 51 of Title 18, United States Code, to injure, oppress, threaten or intimidate employes in the exercise of rights guaranteed under the provisions of the National labor relations act."

An organization drive in the county is now under way under auspices of the United Mine Workers, of which Lewis is president.

Subpenas Continued.

Shocked by tales of brutality from more than a score of witnesses, some of whom said they were threatened with reprisals upon their return to Harlan County, La Follette sought to protect those who had testified before the inquiry was adjourned.

He ordered that Federal subpenas, under which the witnesses appeared, be continued indefinitely. His action would have made those who attacked the witnesses subject to Federal prosecution.

La Follette acted after Ted Creech, son of a Harlan County mine owner, had been arrested and cited to a District of Columbia grand jury on charges of intimidating a witness. Creech was accused of approaching a former deputy sheriff, already under arrest in connection with other acts of violence, a few feet from the Senate hearing room and threatening to see that "you get seven years" for testimony damaging to the coal operators.

Secretary Robert Wohlforth of the Senate committee said he would make all of his records available to the department's agents and lend them some of his "experienced Harlan County investigators" if necessary.

Employes of the Senate committee said privately that the Justice Department inquiry would be the second Federal investigation now under way in Harlan.

Internal Revenue agents, they said, are studying the records of some Harlan County public officials to see whether they have complied with the Federal income tax law.

Father White Appointed Dean Of Catholic U. School of Law

Priest, Lawyer and War Hero on Faculty Since 1931.

REV. ROBERT J. WHITE.

The Rev. Dr. Robert J. White, priest, lawyer and war hero, is the new dean of the school of law of Catholic University. His appointment was announced yesterday by the Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the university.

Dr. White, now 43, had received his bachelor of arts degree from Harvard University and was half way through Harvard law school when the United States entered the World War.

He broke off his studies and enlisted in the Navy on May 5, 1917. Eventually he became a lieutenant, senior grade. He served on transports and helped take Uncle Sam's troops to France. Later he was detailed to the A. E. F. He saw special service in this country, England, France, Italy, Russia and Yugoslavia, and was gassed and wounded overseas.

The American Legion elected Father White its national chaplain in 1933. He also has served as vice president of Fidac, a world organization of allied veterans, numbering approximately 8,000,000 men. For his work in the cause of world peace, he was awarded the Legion of Honor in 1935. He edited the American Legion's Handbook of World Peace.

Father White was not ordained to the priesthood until May 30, 1931, when he was 36 years of age. Prior to entering the Sulpician Seminary, in this city in 1927, he was a lawyer and prosecutor in Massachusetts.

When he was discharged from the Navy on November 9, 1919, he resumed his studies at Harvard Law School and received his LL.B. degree in 1920. His service as a prosecutor for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts was highly praised by his superior, District Attorney Bushnell, who said he was "one of the best who has ever served the public of Massachusetts."

Two years before he was ordained, Father White received the degree of bachelor of sacred theology from the Catholic University, and later the degree of doctor of canon law. He has been a member of the faculty of the university's law school since 1931, teaching comparative canon and civil law and legal ethics.

Mgr. Corrigan, in announcing Father White's appointment as dean of the law school, said: "His training and experience as lawyer and public official and his teaching and priestly influences in the university make him well fitted to assume the post of dean. We feel that the law school, through loyalty to Catholic philosophy and sound and thorough legal teaching, can and will achieve pre-eminence in this important sphere of American life."

Father White said: "We are determined to achieve the highest scholarship standards, limit our standard three-year course to 100 carefully chosen, full-time day students and provide a limited number of local and national scholarships to college graduates of outstanding ability and character."

Man, Facing Trial In 5 Deaths, Grins

Pittsburgh, May 19 (AP).—Seventy-three-year-old Martin J. Sullivan grinned today while relatives of five persons he is accused of murdering testified he had fired the fatal shots on the night of last December 17.

The former policeman of the nearby steel town of Duquesne sat unmoved as he heard his accusers, a 10-year-old girl, a boy, two young men and a father, who lost members of their families in what the State contends was a "wholesale murder" in Duquesne.

The girl, Antoinette Vukelja, sobbed a story that Sullivan had killed her mother and brother and wounded her father. Her father, Joseph, testified that Sullivan came to his home the night he had been held for court on a charge of attacking a little girl. The State charges the former patrolman accused those slain of bringing the charge against him.

Two Indicted In Stock Theft From Widow

Pair Charged in $12,179 Larceny; Clerk Accused of Robbing Mails.

The District grand jury yesterday indicted Max Strahl, youthful and dapper New York City stock salesman, on a charge of the theft of stocks valued at $12,179.50 from Mrs. Helen J. G. Reilly, of 1747 Q street northwest. Mrs. Reilly is the widow of Gen. James Reilly. The indictment charges him with persuading the aged Mrs. Reilly to turn over the stocks in order to cover an investment he had made for her in Oklahoma oil wells.

Harry Rogoff, described by police as an associate of Strahl's, also was named in the indictment. He is said to have been present when a conversation between Strahl and Mrs. Reilly was held here. According to grand jury information he posed as a wealthy oil man.

In another indictment, the grand jurors charged Lois Geddes with embezzlement and larceny after trust. She is said to have pawned 14 typewriters belonging to the Woodstock Typewriter Co., which had been rented during the Presidential campaign. A 57-year-old postal clerk, Alvin O'Nevin, was charged with interfering with the mails when postal authorities said he admitted taking $250 from letters in the last year and a half.

Commissioners Adopt 5-Point D. C. Tax Plan

"still favor the gross receipts tax," but that "in view of the emergency" they believed the gross sales levy should be substituted.

They rejected the income tax, he said, because of the uncertainty as to its constitutionality, with or without provisions including Federal employes.

The decision to restrict receipts from the 1-cent increase in the gas tax to the gas tax fund represented a victory for organized motorists.

Previously, the Commissioners had figured that $500,000 might be diverted for other than highway purposes to reduce the deficit in the general fund. If all of the extra $1,100,000 goes to the highway department, a start can be made on the program of development proposed by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

A possible new source of revenue was brought to the attention of the Commissioners yesterday by the House District Committee when it formally called for a prompt report on the Schulte bill to tax chain stores in the District.

Kennedy promised to include the proposal in his list of all suggested new taxes for consideration by his sub-committee.

The bill, introduced last March, had been all but forgotten until the Supreme Court this week upheld a State tax on chain stores.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, forthwith demanded that the bill be taken up by the District Committee, and then it was learned that the Commissioners had never reported on it.

The bill proposes to impose license fees on all retail stores in Washington, but the tax would step up on chain stores in proportion to the number operated by a single concern.

Thus the fee for an independent store would be but $10 a year. For chain stores, however, the scale would run from $300 a store for ten to $1,000 a store for 100 or more.

Mysterious Beauty Arrested in Boston

Boston, May 19 (AP).—A pretty blonde girl, picked up in a Boston hotel, had police headquarters bewildered tonight after giving detectives three different names. Police finally booked her under the last name she gave, that of Virginia Maher, 21, of New York.

She was held as a suspicious person, which permits authorities to keep her in custody 48 hours without lodging any specific complaint against her. Taken to police headquarters, the girl, slim and with finely-chiseled features, first said she was Ruth Baumgardner, who vanished from Ohio Wesleyan University. This story proved false.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937.

By Bob Burns.

A lot'ta people have asked me why I always use the names of my kinfolks when I talk about 'em. I learned that from an uncle of mine who use'ta be a reporter on the Press-Argus back home—that's my uncle, O. D. Hink. He use'ta wonder why people didn't take more interest in the things he wrote.

Finally Hugh Park, the editor, says, "The trouble with you is, you don't use enough names. People are not interested in the things that happen unless you tell the names of the ones it happens to." He said, "No matter what you write about, use names—names—plenty of names."

I'll never forget the next article he wrote. It read: "George Meadors went to the county fair yesterday and bought three fine cows. Their names were Marie, Annabelle and Daisy."

Silence

"We have sworn ourselves to secrecy; something may be ready for announcement next week," was the statement of one Congressional secretary after emerging the other day from the meeting the secretaries had called to push their efforts for affiliation with some strong organization—maybe the C. I. O.

They decidedly shied from the publicity which followed their first organization meeting, about ten days ago. Several of the secretaries made earnest request that their names not be used in any way with the meeting or with the proposed organization. A secret, fraternal lodge never surrounded itself with more of the curtains of mystery than have the Congressional secretaries.

Col. Charles I. Stengle, president of the A. F. G. E., has called them "temporary employes," and said that their chances for A. F. G. E. affiliation are slender. With this pronouncement to chew on, the secretaries indicated at the one open meeting—their first one—that they would seek alignment with Lewis' C. I. O. It was the tentative plan to have a C. I. O. organizer address them at the meeting this week.

But on this there can only be conjecture. "We have sworn ourselves to secrecy," they later announced.

R. D. W. Connor, archivist of the United States, announces the promotion of Frank D. McAllister, a deputy examiner in the division of accessions, National Archives, as chief of the division of department archives, No. 3. This division will have charge of the records recently removed from the Senate. Prior to his appointment as deputy examiner, McAllister was employed in the office of Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, and his familiarity with the work of the Senate particularly qualifies him to handle the records of that body.

Catherine Bauer, authority on American housing, will speak on "The Present Housing Situation" at a meeting to be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the auditorium of the old Interior Building. The address, to be illustrated by slides showing American and European housing projects, will be presented under the sponsorship of the Social Security Board Union.

Miss Bauer has written several important books on the housing problem. She is secretary of the Labor Housing Conference, and is consultant on housing exhibits for the forthcoming New York World's Fair.

An excursion to housing developments in Washington and Greenbelt will be conducted at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon under the direction of the Social Security Board Union. The bus will leave the Social Security Building, 1712 G street northwest, promptly at 2 o'clock.

Dances

Two dances have received outstanding interest this week. One is the affair to be given by the North Carolina Democratic Club at 9:30 o'clock this evening in the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel. The dance is in commemoration of the signing of the Mecklenburg Declaration, an historic incident for Carolinians. William M. Hodges is chairman of the arrangements.

And then, on Saturday night, General Accounting Office employes and their friends will dance in the Wardman Park Hotel. Lodge No. 8, A. F. G. E., sponsors this affair. The hours are 10 to 1.

Several Government employes are taking part in the annual spring play to be staged by the Troupers of East Washington Community Center at the Eastern High School Tuesday evening. The play, "Take My Advice," will have Government talent, as follows: Frances Green, of Rural Electrification; Patricia Page, of Treasury; Donald Sisler, of Labor; Ted Freter, of General Accounting Office, and L. Zaff Rogers of Treasury. The play is directed by Arthur Rhodes, of the Navy Yard.

The U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post, No. 2, American Legion, will hold memorial services at 11 a. m., May 30, at the Peace Cross in the World War Section of Arlington Cemetery. An anchor of poppies will be placed in tribute. Representative Gearhart, past commander of the American Legion in California, will be the speaker. All legionnaires are invited.

House Group To Investigate Transit Firm

Dirksen Wants 'Water,' If Present, 'Squeezed' From Stock.

An investigation of the Capital Transit Co. was ordered yesterday by the House District Committee with emphasis to be placed on fares and one-man car operation.

The inquiry was voted upon motion of Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, on the basis of two bills he introduced calling for a ban on one-man cars and buses, and a maximum fare of 7 cents cash.

A special sub-committee will be appointed by Chairman Mary T. Norton to conduct the inquiry just as soon as some of the committee members are free from other duties.

House Group Busy.

Currently, the House District Committee is studying District tax proposals, investigating complaints against the United States Attorney's office, holding hearings on bills to amend the local liquor act, and considering a measure to put Washington on a daylight-saving time schedule.

The transit inquiry ordered was the second attempt made by Dirksen to bring about the investigation. Several weeks ago he made a similar motion and thought it was adopted. Later it developed the committee clerk had no record of the action.

Dirksen said the sub-committee should delve into the financial set-up of the company.

"Time for Inquiry."

It is time for an investigation to determine the disposition of this company," he said.

There is something wrong with the car company that has operating revenues of $10,000,000 a year and yet hasn't paid any dividends since 1928.

"If there's water in there, it's high time it is squeezed out."

The Public Utilities Commission is now engaged in proceedings to establish a valuation for the company preparatory to considering an application for an increase in fare from four tokens for 30 cents to three tokens for 25 cents.

New Bus Line.

Because of a ban on running heavy buses over Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, the Capital Transit Co. today will put a new bus line into operation between Barney circle, at Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and sections of East and South Washington.

Buses of the East Washington-Suburban and South Washington lines will hereafter turn around at Barney circle, it was announced. The new service, to be known as the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge line, will serve Benning, Ely street, Hillcrest, Randle Heights and Anacostia.

When destined for Barney circle, the East Washington - Suburban, South Washington and Pennsylvania Avenue Bride line buses will leave their terminals two minutes earlier than at present. There will be no change in the schedule of buses leaving Barney circle.

An estate of approximately $256,000 was left by Dr. Thomas L. Rust, dental surgeon, who died April 20, it was shown in District Court yesterday when his will was filed for probate.

The will directed that six religious and medical institutions here and in Alexandria should have $5,000 each. They were Christ's Episcopal Church and Episcopal High School, both of Alexandria, the vestry of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, the American Dental Association and the Episcopal Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat and the George Washington University Hospital.

Eight relatives were given $15,000 each. They were Mrs. Sue K. R. Lee, Towson, Md.; Mrs. Lucy Rust Sinclair, jr., Waterbury, Conn.; Mrs. Mary Rust Hulme, England; David N. Rust, jr., James S. Rust, Mrs. R. Maude Hodgkin and Nathalie S. Ostland. In addition a trust fund of $13,000 was set up for James S. Rust.

All that is left in the estate is to be given to the Church of St. Peter and St. Paul for use as a memorial to Dr. Rust's parents, David Newton Rust and Mary Locke Rust.

U. S. Workers Get Franklin Medals

The 1937 Franklin medals were awarded yesterday to Dr. Robert A. Millikan, chairman of the executive council of the California Institute of Technology, for isolation and measurement of the electron, and to Dr. Peter Debye, director of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute of Physics for his research on the electrical properties of insulators, it was reported yesterday from Philadelphia by the Associated Press.

The awards were made at the Franklin Institute's annual medal day meeting. Thirteen other men were honored for scientific research and invention, among them Herbert L. Whittemore, of the Bureau of Standards, and William Bowie, of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, both of this city.

Jewish Drive Total Exceeds Quota by $300

Campaign to Continue Another Week for Cleanup.

An enthusiastic meeting of drive workers last night at the Jewish Community Center hailed the announcement that the United Jewish Appeal had raised $300 more than the $80,000 campaign quota.

Although the drive officially closed last night, the workers agreed to continue to canvass another week or ten days in order that at least 500 more prospective contributors might be reached.

Morris Simon, co-chairman of the drive, who presided, pointed out that $63,000 was raised in last year's campaign from 2,500 contributors, while this year only 2,200 individual donations had been received.

Still a Chance.

"We must give veery Jewish family in Washington the opportunity to contribute," he said, "in order that every possible dollar may be raised to alleviate the distress among our brethren in other lands." Praising various drive leaders, Simon referred to Louis E. Spiegler, campaign director, as "the real backbone of the drive."

Morris Cafritz, co-chairman of the drive, paid high tribute to the Youth Division, under the leadership of Hy Lytton and Elizabeth Ann Kaufman, for their splendid efforts in raising more than $2,500 this year.

John M. Safer, vice chairman, described the tragic situation of Jews throughout the world and termed Palestine the center of many thousands facing destitution in European ghettos.

Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, vice chairman of the drive, who personally raised more than $7,000 in the campaign, spoke warmly in praise of the sacrifices of the volunteer workers and urged them to continue the canvass. Every dollar raised, she said, "will feed another starving soul in Europe."

Traffic Accidents Injure Five Here

Five persons were injured in traffic accidents yesterday.

John Marshall, 11, of the 600 block of Orleans place northeast, was critically injured when struck by a truck driven, police said, by Charles Holt, 26, of the 700 block of Fifth street northeast. At Casualty Hospital, where the boy was taken, physians said both legs and his skull were fractured and that he had suffered internal injuries.

Eloise Bolling, 11, of 630 Second street northeast, was struck by a truck in front of her home. She was taken to Casualty Hospital. Police said the truck was operated by Raymond C. Griffin, 38, of 116 Eleventh street northeast.

D. C. Business Losses Forecast If Wage Law Is Retroactive

Bankruptcies Are Threat, Defense in Minimum Pay Suit Tells Court; Municipal Judge Asks for Briefs From Both Sides.

Serious financial situations will face scores of Washington business establishments if the minimum wage law for the District is held to be retroactive, in its enforcement, to the date in 1923 when the United States Supreme Court declared it unconstitutional, attorneys asserted yesterday in Municipal Court in opposing the claims of two women who are seeking the difference between their actual wages and those they should have been paid under the minimum wage law.

The law was passed in 1918, and was declared invalid in 1923, when the United States Supreme Court held it interfered with the contractual rights between employer and employe. Then, in March of this year in a case involving the Washington State minimum wage law, the court reversed itself and held the long dormant act legal.

Since then, Attorney General Cummings and Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal have held the law still in effect, no action having been taken to wipe it off the books.

Waitress Asks Back Wages.

Ruth Cornett, a waitress in Dick's Grill, on E street northwest, brought the muddled situation to a head when she filed suit for $335 which she claimed was due her as the difference between what she actually was paid and what she should have been paid under the $16.50 weekly wage set by the board more than 15 years ago. She was joined by Mrs. Gertrude Perry, who claimed $375 from a hotel where she was employed in the laundry.

After listening to arguments, Judge Ellen Raedy, in Municipal Court, directed attorneys representing the employers and employes to submit briefs outlining their legal arguments. She said she would not make a final ruling until she had read the briefs and had studied the situation.

Attorneys representing the employers said that if the law is held to be retroactive, employers of female help in the District may stand serious financial setbacks through having to pay back salaries to their employes who have not been paid the full minimum wage scale.

Cite Period of Suspension.

On the other hand, Attorneys Warren E. Miller, C. L. Dawson, Irwin Bolotin and Samuel B. Brown, representing the two plaintiffs, said the employers did not come into court with clean hands, because their employment contracts were "unconscionable" and in "defiance of legislative policy" as expressed by the act.

Joseph C. McGarraghy, attorney for the Washington Hotel Men's Association, and Samuel Boyd, representing Dick's Grill, maintained the law was not retroactive and that there was no legal way of forcing their clients to reimburse the employes. Opposing counsel argued over the question of whether the law was effective while under the ban of the United States Supreme Court or whether it had been in a period of suspension during the last 15 years. It was pointed out there is still no board to promulgate the rules and regulations of the act.

Jury May Decide Rice Case Today

Whether L. Douglas Rice, vice president and general manager of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co., was guilty of contempt of the United States Senate when he ignored a subpena directing him to appear before the Senate Committee investigating Civil Liberties will be determined by a jury in District Court today, it was indicated last night when Justice Peyton Gordon closed the taking of testimony and instructed opposing counsel to begin their arguments.

Defense Attorney A. L. Newmyer asserted the Rice angle of the summation of the testimony would be completed this morning, leaving only the Government's summation and the judge's instructions.

Rice is charged also with having failed to produce records that were formally demanded. Five others, indicted on similar charges, remain to be tried.

4 Children Flee School to Catch Coronation Boat

When four 6-year-old girls, first grade students at the Taylor School, Seventh and G streets northeast, disappeared yesterday, older heads at the school thought the circus grounds would be the place to look for them.

However, they were found at Fifteenth and H streets northwest looking for a boat. This was explained later when they were "on the carpet" for leaving school. They said they were coronation bound and had been told that the ship left for London from Fifteenth and H.

Chevy Chase Denied Major Library Unit

New Main Building More Important, Dr. Bowerman Tells Citizens.

A major branch of the Public Library in Chevy Chase will not be possible for some time, Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian of the Public Library, told the Chevy Chase Citizens Association last night.

"I'm afraid I am going to tell you what you don't want me to say." Dr. Bowerman remarked before revealing he would recommend to the board of trustees of the Public Library that no major branch library be established in Chevy Chase.

The librarian stated a new main library was "absolutely essential" before any other library projects were undertaken. He described the present library force as too small, the library building as inadequate, and pointed out that 17,000 square feet of floor space was being rented to take care of some of the overflow of equipment.

He said it would be impossible to administer any more branch libraries with the present main library facilities. The inadequate facilities at the Eighth and K streets building preclude any possibility of arranging for more branches and supervising their care and circulation.

His reference to "alternatives" was directed against a resolution of the Federation of Citizens Associations, adopted several months ago, which suggested the question of a new main building be postponed until additional branch libraries had been established.

Dr. Bowerman cited figures for the District's library showing there are 132,000 registered readers, and a circulation of over 3,000,000 volumes.

The speaker was introduced by Commissioner Hazen, who said it took about "20 years" of effort for each branch library established so far.

In line with his suggestion, the association adopted two resolutions, one urging a branch library for Chevy Chase and the other favoring a new building for the main library. It also heard an address by Norman J. Nelson, principal of Woodrow Wilson High School.

Custodial Workers May Get Increases

The Interior Department supply bill which passed the House yesterday provides raises of $60 a year for 2,133 custodial employes in the District and 150 in the field service.

This feature of the bill adds $145,000 to the budget estimates.

Active in support of the increase as the bill was argued on the House floor yesterday was Representative James Fitzpatrick, of New York, who told of a custodial worker who served the Government for 37 years without promotion or salary increase. The United States Government Employes organization was active in having the item placed in the bill in the committee.

Merchants Approve Curtailment of Hours

The department stores division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association decided to curtail hours during the summer months by closing stores at 5:30 p. m., beginning June 10, and to close all day on all Saturdays during July and August, except the first Saturday in July.

The association now is polling its membership to ascertain the stores that will crtail their summer hours, and will announce the names of the stores with the hours they will maintain, as soon as the poll is completed.

Playgrounds Impasse Goes To D.C. Heads

Commissioners Will Be Asked to Give Ruling on Police Control.

Education Board Meets Tomorrow to Discuss Budget for 1939.

School playgrounds in the District have become so overrun with children using them after school hours when no supervisor is on duty that Supt. Frank W. Ballou yesterday recommended that the board of education seek the co-operation of the District Commissioners.

The board discussed the possibilities of posting trespass warnings on all school grounds, and voted to bring the situation to the attention of the Commissioners.

"We get many complaints from persons living adjacent to school grounds," reported Dr. Ballou," and usually we refer these complaints to the police officials."

The superintendent said the police in turn inform complainants they have no jurisdiction over use of school grounds. In view of the dilemma over authority to police the grounds, Dr. Ballou recommended the Commissioners be asked for a ruling.

Board Meets Tomorrow.

The board will meet in special session at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Franklin Building, Thirteenth and K streets northwest, to hear citizens' proposals for school budget items for 1939. Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, reported yesterday representatives of citizens' and other civic groups in all sections of the city are expected to be present.

The board members will not only hear the citizens' petitions verbally but will receive their written briefs in order to give their requests further consideration later.

Dr. Ballou announced dates for high school commencements next month, and the board members who will preside over the several graduation functions. In the white high schools commencements are scheduled for June 22 and 23 as follows: Eastern, June 22, George M. Whitwell, presiding; Roosevelt, June 22, 8 p. m., Robert A. Maurer; Woodrow Wilson High School, June 23, 4:30 p. m., Mrs. Doyle; Western, June 23, 4:30 p. m., Maurer; McKinley, June 23, 8 p. m., Gratz E. Dunkum; Central, June 23, 8 p. m., Henry Quinn.

Wilson Finals June 23.

Commencement at Wilson Teachers College will be June 23 at 8 p. m., with Mrs. Doyle and Dr. Ballou taking part in the ceremonies.

In the colored divisions commencements have been arranged as follows: Miner Teacher College, June 24, 10:30 a. m., E. A. Clark presiding; Armstrong June 21, 8 p. m., Dr. J. Hayden Johnson; Cardozo, June 22, 8 p. m., J. H. Wilson; Dunbar, June 23, 8 p. m., Mrs. Mary McNeil.

The board formally accepted the wing recently constructed to Anacostia High School.

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith reported hazardous traffic conditions in the vicinity of the Ben Murch School grounds, and the board subsequently asked Dr. Ballou to compile a list of all dangerous street crossings near schools. Data gathered will be furnished to traffic officials.

Administration Seeks to Block Flood Measure

$800,000,000 Independent Bill Is Opposed; Control Areas Disclosed.

Sections selected for the Administration's projected subdivision of the country into "TVA" power and flood control areas were disclosed yesterday, as the Administration leadership fought back Congressional efforts to bring out an $800,000,000 flood control program of its own.

Demands that Congress "act now" to prevent recurrence of flood disasters echoed through the Capitol, in the face of Administration efforts to hold up independent action pending the President's imminent power message.

The President's message, expected by leaders in the next three or four days, probably will recommend separate "TVA" authorities in several valley sections, with power to make surveys and long-time plans, and eventually to act as administrative and spending bodies.

Program Outlined.

The areas embraced in the President's proposed sweeping extension of the TVA principle were reported as follows:

The Ohio and Great Lakes area. Extension of the TVA proper to include the Cumberland River and all waters in that area down to the Gulf.

The Southwest, including Arkansas, New Mexico and Texas.

The Pacific Northwest, including Washington and Oregon.

Meanwhile the legal dispute as to TVA constitutionality entered another round, as the Georgia Power Co. appealed to the Supreme Court from a Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals decision at New Orleans permitting the TVA to continue to build new power lines and to sell electricity in Georgia.

The complex legal tangle was further involved by the suit. Ramification included a ruling by Northwestern Gorgia Federal District Court, allowing TVA to extend operations in Georgia. Later the Eastern Tennessee Federal District Court had temporarily enjoined TVA from expansion in eight States, Georgia included.

The New Orleans Fifth Circuit Court affirmed the Georgia court ruling, holding that since it came first its decision should stand until final adjudication by the Supreme Court.

Asks Immediate Action.

In its appeal petition to the Supreme Court yesterday, the Georgia Power Co. contended the Tennessee case is much broader and raises additional issues. It said the 19 power companies that joined in the Tennessee suit did so for the purpose of "avoiding a multiplicity of suits."

It contended denial of the right to participate in the Tennessee case would result in "wasteful duplication of two trials of the question" and "would establish a precedent constituting a complete departure from principles governing the administration of courts of concurrent jurisdiction."

As House flood control advocates grew restive under power program delay, Chairman Whittington of the Flood Control Committee rose in the House to demand immediate action on $800,0000,000 flood control recommendations of Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of Army Engineers.

Green Credits A. F. L. for Major Labor Laws, Derides C. I. O. as 'Do Nothing' Organization

Federation Will Never Surrender, Md.-D. C. Group Is Told.

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., May 19.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, attacked the Committee for Industrial Organization today during closing sessions of the annual meeting of the Maryland-District of Columbia Federation here.

Green claimed for the A. F. of L. credit for enactment of major Federal labor legislation.

Green, in his attacks on the C. I. O., did not call John L. Lewis by name but did attack him by inference. After referring to the "one man who controls and decides everything," Green added:

"I suppose he wants the federation to come in and ask to be taken in by him. In the name of that grand old man, Samuel Gompers, the A. F. of L. will never surrender. It does not follow either Hitler, Mussolini, or Stalin."

Joseph P. McCurdy, who also holds a State job as one of three directors of the State employment insurance division, was re-elected president of the federation. He was unopposed.

WILLIAM GREEN.

C. I. O. organizes all men in one industry into one union. In that connection, Green said that creation of a "condition where a janitor or other unskilled laborer fixes the wages of highly skilled labor, you're going to have rebellion."

He declared that the present split in labor came "because of the consuming ambition of some who were impatient and seized upon an issue which played upon the passions of the workers because they want to be dictators of the labor world."

Green said the A. F. of L. deserves credit for enactment of the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act, the Bacon-Davis act which concerns wage scales paid on construction of public buildings and the Wagner labor relations act.

"I say publicly, without fear of challenge, that the A. F. of L. was responsible for the construction and enactment of the labor relations act," he stated. "Did you ever hear of any organization called X Y Z of B U T or C. I. O. doing anything."

Other officers elected were:

Vice presidents, John Locher and Robert Lester, Washington; G. Kingston Howard and F. N. Kershaw, Baltimore; John L. Geist, Hagerstown, and Walter Grant, Cumberland; Frank J. Coleman, Washintgon, secretary; J. E. Toome, Washington, treasurer, and Harry Thompson, Washington, organizer.

Fleet to Steam Past George Today in Coronation Review

King, Queen and Princess Elizabeth to See Pride of Navy and 17 Foreign Ships Led by U. S. S. New York.

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, England, May 19.—King George VI, Queen Elizabeth, and little Princess Elizabeth came to crowded Portsmouth today to see the pride of Britain's navy.

The King boarded the royal yacht, Victoria and Albert, to a 21-gun salute for a royal dinner preparatory to reviewing the fleet tomorrow.

Thirty minutes earlier, the royal party rode over a 6-mile parade course while cordons of marines, territorials and former service men restrained the cheering thousands. The 11-year-old heiress presumptive to the British throne smiled and nodded to the throng.

The yacht will anchor in the bay tomorrow morning and in the afternoon will steam past vessels of the British Mediterranean and home fleets and a line of 17 foreign warships, headed by the United States battleship New York, in a two-hour coronation review.

Earlier today, the King and Queen drove through the rain to Guildhall to receive homage from the City of London—the "one square mile" within the heart of the capital.

Peace in Steel Depends Upon Election Today

Workers to Decide Which Union Will Bargain for Them.

tween 6 a. m. tomorrow and 1 a. m. Friday—will decide whether Murray's Steel Workers Organizing Committee will represent all Jones & Laughlin workers as the exclusive collective bargaining agency.

Both Jones & Laughlin and Republic Steel denied any attempt at interference in the balloting which was agreed upon last week to end a 36-hour strike at the J. & L. plants.

Murray, chief lieutenant in the drive of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization to enlist the Nation's 570,000 mill men in one big industrial union, declared seven Republic police and plant officials and 30 "thugs" of what he called the "gas pipe gang" were concentrated at Aliquippa.

He charged they were there "to break up the election by force and intimidation."

Murray wired Attorney General Homer S. Cummings:

"I respectfully request that there be instituted by your department an immediate investigation to ascertain the facts in the situation, and if true, there be immediate criminal proceedings started against any offenders of the criminal provisions of the national labor relations act or of any other Federal statute violated in this matter."

"Observers" on Hand.

Republic Steel said "a few trained observers" had been in the mill town "in view of newspaper reports carrying threats of a strike against Republic."

"We deny that any of these men were present during any part of the recent strike at Jones & Laughlin," the company stated, "and further deny that they were sent to Aliquippa to interfere with the election."

Republic, with its 32,000 workers, is one of five major independent steel producers, against which the union has announced it would concentrate its campaign for collective bargaining contracts as soon as the results of tomorrow's election are known.

The group included Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Bethlehem, Crucible and Inland Steel corporations.

Regional Director Ernest C. Dunbar, of the Labor Board, requested Gov. George H. Earle for State police at the Pittsburgh works of Jones & Laughlin as well as 18 miles down the Ohio River at Aliquippa.

He is in charge of the election and will be aided by 65 agents of the labor board.

C. I. O. Wins Vote.

Boston, May 19 (AP).—The first election in New England in which the Committee for Industrial Organization competed on the same ballot with the American Federation of Labor, under auspices of the regional office of the National Labor Relations Board, tonight gave a victory to the C. I. O.

Boycott Repudiated.

Hollywood, May 19 (AP).—Executive committeemen of the striking Federated Motion Picture Crafts voted today to repudiate an appeal which its publicity committee telegraphed yesterday to labor organizations asking a national boycott against films in which five leaders of the nonstriking screen actors' guild appear.

The executive committee voted to wire retractions to the American Federation of Labor and Committee for Industrial Organization.

Business Manager Charles Lessing of the F. M. P. C. declared before the vote the boycott appeal was not authorized. He said the executive committee considered issuing the appeal, but took no final action and that he, personally, was opposed to "bringing personalities" into the strike.

7,000 Auto Workers Strike.

South Bend, Ind., May 19 (AP).—Russell Merrill, president of Studebaker Local, No. 5, United Automobile Workers of America, announced tonight there would be "no settlement" of the strike of nearly 7,000 workers at the Studebaker Corporation plants here before a meeting of all union members tomorrow morning.

He declared the strike which began suddenly today had not been called at first by the union, but "was spontaneous on the part of the workers on the final assembly."

He said the strike was a protest of the union against nonunion employes and hinted that the union seeks a closed shop for wage-earners.

British Envoy Favors Trade Pact With U. S.

Lindsay Assures Farmer of Favored Treatment for Tariff Cuts.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 19.—Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to the United States, said today that Great Britain is willing to assure the American farmer of "favorable treatment" in British markets in return for a reduction in the United States tariff on goods from the United Kingdom.

The ambassador said he was speaking "not as a diplomat" but "as the commercial representative of a country which does the largest trade with the United States—in other words, as your best customer."

Sir Ronald also said he "earnestly hoped" a reciprocal trade agreement, now in the course of negotiation, would be concluded between the United States and Great Britain.

At the same time, the Argentine ambassador, Felipe A. Espil, said Argentina's exchange restrictions affecting United States exports to the South American country may be eliminated if a similar reciprocal trade pact between the two nations is signed.

Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, said that "if the world is to be saved from war," governments must "adopt constructive and co-operative commercial policies such as will make for peace."

Graduating Nurse Treats Mother as Her First Patient

Dorothy Forsht, honor graduate at the Emergency Hospital Nurses' School, had a practical introduction to her course yesterday.

A few hours before she was to receive her diploma, her mother, Mrs. D. I. Forsht, of Clinton, Md., en route to Washington, was bruised and cut when an automobile in which she was riding skidded near Constitution avenue and Eighth street northwest.

It was Dorothy's first case since completing her work with the Emergency Hospital group. She treated her mother in the dispensary, then received her diploma.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Classic Drama Comes Back to Loew's Palace

'Romeo and Juliet' Will Be Shown at Popular Scale of Prices.

"Romeo and Juliet," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's superb picturization of the Shakespeare tragedy, will be shown for the first time in Washington at popular prices as chief feature of the bill beginning tomorrow at Loew's Palace Theater. In this subject, which opened the season at the National Theater as a "road show" attraction, the principal roles are played by Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard. They are supported by a cast of stars, led by John Barrymore, Edna May Oliver, Basil Rathbone, Andy Devine, C. Aubrey Smith and a host of others. This is by far the most significant approach to Shakespeare that the screen has made. It is worthy of maximum attention—and patronage.

Charles Winninger, George Brent and Anita Louise have the foremost roles in "The Go-Getter," which comes to the screen of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater tomorrow. The story is one of Peter B. Kyne's "Cappy Ricks" creations and affords the featured players abundant opportunities to do their best work for the cinema. On the stage, the new bill at the Earle will be headlined by Guy Lombardo and His Royal Canadians Orchestra. They will bring with them a considerable list of specialists who will make the "band act" something in the nature of a complete revue.

"The Good Old Soak," with Wallace Beery in the title role, will be the chief screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater next week, beginning tomorrow, with Una Merkel, Eric Linden, Judith Barrett, Betty Furness, Ted Healy, Janet Beecher and George Sidney in the major supporting roles. On the stage, the bill will be featured by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra, with their full quota of engaging specialists. Known as "the king of jazz," Whiteman really is the dean of "modern music" in America. He will feature some of the works that have made him famous on the Capitol bill, including George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," which he introduced to the musical world. Phil Lampkin, as usual will be in the pit and the program will be completed by the new issue of the Movietone News.

John Trent, the aviator snatched from a cockpit to pose before the cameras; George Bancroft, Molly Lamont and Ruth Coleman, have the leading roles in "A Doctor's Diary," announced as the chief screen feature of the bill beginning tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater. This will be Trent's first appearance in a stellar role. The bill will be augmented by the usual abbreviated camera subjects and full 15-minute newsreel.

"Lost Horizon," the Frank Capra production for Columbia Pictures, based on the novel of the same name by James Hilton, has achieved such momentum as a "road show" attraction at the National Theater that it will be held for a second week at the E street playhouse. The co-stellar roles are played by Ronald Colman and Jane Wyatt, with H. B. Warner, Sam Jaffe and a strong cast in support.

"Wake Up and Live," the lively musical screen comedy in which the principal roles are played by Ben Bernie and his orchestra, Jack Haley, Alice Faye, Patsy Kelly, Ned Sparks and a long list of others, will return to the F street screen at Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow, after having enjoyed an earlier engagement within stone's throw. The bill will be augmented by short reels and newsreel.

"Amphitryon," or, as it is known in English, "The Gods at Play," will continue for a second week on the screen at the Belasco Theater. It has been acclaimed by both press and public as the best screen comedy of European manufacture ever shown on the screen of the Lafayette Square house. The bill is supplemented by short reels and news events.

RKO-Keith's Theater announces that owing to the popularity of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Shall We Dance," that engaging subject will be continued for a third week. With it will go "The March of Time" and the new Pathe News devoted entirely to the coronation of George VI.

At the Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday, the major attraction will be the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur production of "Crime Without Passion," in which the stellar roles are played by Claude Rains and Margo. The foremost of the auxiliaries will be "Rain for the Earth," a Works Progress Administration production.

Saturday night of this week in Roosevelt auditorium, the Lisa Gardiner School of Dance will present a program that is said to embody all forms of terpsichorean effort. Miss Gardiner herself will be seen in two solo dances. She was formerly an associate of the renowned Pavlowa.

The Rialto Theater announces another double-feature bill for the week beginning next Sunday. The foremost feature will be Robert Donat in "The Ghost Goes West;" the secondary, a revival of Samuel Goldwyn's production of "Barbary Coast," in which the principal roles are played by Edward G. Robinson, Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea.

Glen Echo Park, despite the chill weather of this belated spring in the National Capital, is running at full, midsummer speed, with more than 50 amusement devices in operation. The Crystal Pool will open to the public on May 27.

Second place went to Frederick L. Graham, of New York City, on Murphy. C. Hoen Phillips, of Short Hills, N. J., on Maggie, was third. Other contestants in the finals were Robert L. Burger, of Cincinnati, Ohio; T. Stacey Capers, of Hollidaysburg, Pa., and William B. Sheperd, of Short Hills, N. J.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Charles Winninger and George Brent Gain Prestige By Work in New Peter B. Kyne Film of Cappy Ricks

"The Go-Getter," Coming to the Earle Screen Tomorrow, Affords Both Players Fine Opportunity for Impressive Portrayals; Coronation Newsreels All Arrive in Town at the Same Time; "Lost Horizon" Takes Its Place Among the "Big Ones;" Notes.

FROM the mad scramble for eminence in Hollywood there is gradually emerging one of the veteran actors of the theater whose work before the cameras and microphones has betrayed a constantly mounting measure of ability and interest. Charles Winninger is the name of this noted player, who finally has "found himself" in a comparatively new medium for the outlet of his talent.

BELL.

These conclusions are reached after having previewed the Warner Brothers' production of "The Go-Getter" in the private projection room in the Earle Theater Building on Tuesday night. In this celluloid transcription of a Peter B. Kyne story of Cappy Ricks, our old friend Mr. Winninger practically "steals the show," although fine impersonations also are offered by George Brent, in the title role, and Anita Louise, as Cappy's daughter, who falls in love and means it.

Charlie Winninger has been around the theater for a considerable period of time now. He last was seen on a local stage, I believe, in the revival of "Show Boat," at the National. On the radio, of course, he has been a formidable figure for years. The noteworthy aspect of his rise in pictures, it seems to me, is that on the stage he always was a comedian, who, on the slightest provocation would play a trombone solo—which he did remarkably well. He now does what the vernacular of the theater dubs "straight" parts and portrays them with all of the accumulated prowess of a veteran who has been on the boards for more years than he will confess.

Charlie Winninger, in private life, is the husband of Blanche Ring, in her day the foremost singing comedienne on the musical comedy and vaudeville stages, and therefore was the brother-in-law of the late Thomas Meighan, one of the cinema's most famous stars, and Frances Ring, Blanche's sister, who was Mrs. Thomas Meighan. Tommie Meighan and Frances Ring met when both were playing in the stage version of George Ade's comedy of "The College Widow," fell in love and were married. It was one of the happiest and most enduring matings known to "show business."

After an anniversary party fostered by The Post a few years ago, this desk sat at a crack-o'-dawn breakfast in Tom O'Donnell's seafood grill with Charlie Winninger, the team known as "Molasses and January"—otherwise "Pick and Pat"—two-thirds of the Three X Sisters, Tom Moore and several others who had participated in the earlier party, and marveled at the ability of Winninger to pencil a "theme song" dedicated to the event on the cover of his menu. The member of the "X" team who did the arranging examined the composition and described it as musically sound. This sterling actor's performance in "The Go-Getter" is no less dramatically sound.

But the Winninger Cappy Ricks is not the only fine portrayal in this picture. George Brent comes through with one of the best performances he has done for the lenses in many months, in the title role, and Anita Louise gives further indication that she is one of the rising young stars of Hollywood by the merit of her delineation of the role of Cappy's daughter who falls in love and will not take "No" for an answer. This only bears out an impression that crystallized with her portrayal opposite Errol Flynn, with Margaret Lindsay, in "Green Light."

You will want to see "The Go-Getter." Nothing heavy or lugubrious, but interesting and enlivening entertainment.

• • • •

Following the projection of "The Go-Getter" Tuesday evening, the ladies and gentlemen of the press were further regaled by a screening of the newly arrived Paramount News shots of the coronation of King George VI. Considering the fact that the pictures were taken for the most part in a driving rain, they are remarkably intimate and expository of what really went on in London. There are a surprising number of what seem to be "close-ups" in the reel, although that may have been accomplished by the use of telescopic lenses.

Practically all of the coronation newsreels arrived in Washington Tuesday evening at about the same time. I believe the Fox Movietone News was the first to get on the screen, at Loew's Capitol, but all of the downtown houses, so far as I am able to learn, had the prints for exhibition at about the same time—meaning in time for the 9 o'clock show.

They are informative and distinctive in their detailed reproduction of the traditional "pomp and circumstance" that attend the crowning of a new British monarch.

• • • •

It is an eloquent commentary upon the discrimination of the Washington public that "Lost Horizon," being presented currently as a "road show" at the National Theater, has gained steadily in patronage since its opening Sunday night. On Tuesday night, according to personal observation, this new Frank Capra production for Columbia Pictures played to virtually a capacity house. Last night's was no worse.

This is as it should be. "Lost Horizon" is a superior picture from every point of view. It is, perhaps, gaited more accurately to the inclinations and tastes of the imaginative idealists than it is to the grim demands of the strict realists, but it still is a film that deserves to be bracketed in the highest levels of artistry the cinema has attained.

I recommend that you see it and take seriously the profound philosophy of life which it expounds.

• • • •

It was pleasant yesterday to receive the following note from Gardner Harding, convention manager of the first national convention of the American Theater Council, dated New York, May 18: "Dear Mr. Bell—I was very glad to hear from Mr. Leonard Bergman that you have consented to be one of the speakers at our Drama Critics' luncheon on Tuesday, May 25. Burns Mantle, John Anderson and F. J. Carmody also consented to speak and Frank Crownshield will be in the chair. We hope you will stay for the whole convention as the program is getting better every day. Faithfully yours, "GARDNER HARDING."

Now the only remaining points are how to get there and what to say—if anything.

Casual-Observation Note.

Life is getting more complicated every day!

In Top Rank of Character Actors

In the role of Cappy Ricks in "The Go-Getter," coming to the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater tomorrow, Charles Winninger executes one of the finest character studies he ever has contributed either to the stage or the screen. Roles of equal importance are played with comparable skill by George Brent, in the title role, and Anita Louise, as the "heart interest" in the Peter B. Kyne story.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, May 19—Settin' around (M-G-M): If any of you movie addicts have been worried by sensational articles in the fan magazines, predicting that television will soon outmode the talkies, forget it. Practical television is still a million miles from perfection, and even if it is perfected it will not threaten the movies and your favorite stars in the least.

GENE RAYMOND.

That's the opinion of Norma Shearer's brother, Douglas, chief of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sound engineers (and before any cynic jumps to the conclusion that he is just another Hollywood relative, let me add that Doug ranks among the top recording technicians). Being somewhat concerned about those prophesies, I asked him today what M-G-M is doing about television. His answer was summed up in one short word, "Nothing!"

He explained that television, in spite of all the ballyhoo, has progressed little within the last five years. In order to televise a picture, the wave length must be so short that it can not be transmitted more than a few miles. If a longer wave with greater carrying power is used, the picture becomes so fuzzy that facial features, for instance, are lost. Doug believes this one hurdle rules television out as far as movies are concerned.

Apparently Garbo and Gable and Harlow, who were, in a recent article, called unsuited for television, will survive a while longer.

On the set where Jeanette MacDonald and Allan Jones were costarring in the new musical, "The Firefly," I watched them shoot the umpteenth take of a dramatic close-up between the two principals one of those complicated scenes involving long, tongue-twisting speeches and trick camera effects. They had worked on that sequence all the previous afternoon, but after each take the director expressed dissatisfaction. While I stood on the sidelines, a messenger boy rushed to the stage and delivered a telegram to Leonard. It was from Gene Raymond and read:

"For gosh sake, Bob, be a pal. Jeanette and I want to get married June seventeenth."

I talked with Jeanette about her ambition to sing grand opera. Because of that ambition she has driven herself unmercifully—learned four languages; spent long hours practicing tediously; acquired an operatic repertoire. Last fall, ironically, she received an offer from the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company and had to reject it because of a conflicting picture assignment.

"I was bitter about it, then," she told me. "I was tired of studying and practicing, and I had persuaded myself that I was ready for a Metropolitan debut. This year I've worked harder than ever and improved so much that I'm glad the debut is still in the future. A Metropolitan success last year might have been the result of my screen success—and that would ruin me!" ....

Seems those rib-ticklers of Pete Smith's are as much fun to make as to watch. On the "Carnival of Paris" set, I saw Ann Rutherford play a scene in which she tripped a butler who was juggling a tray of pastry. She said she could better the scene and demanded another take. A second time the pies splattered over the floor and as the poor butler scrambled to his feet, Ann suggested a third take. "What is this, a gag?" Pete Smith roared.

"No," said Ann, "it's a suppressed desire. I've always wanted to trip a man with a tray of pastries and this is my big chance!"

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

When a non-expert picks up a hand he appraises its strength and then bothers no more about valuation. So far as he is concerned, that hand remains at its original valuation for the duration of the bidding.

Not so with the expert. As the bidding takes its course his hand undergoes subtle changes in worth. A near-bust, opposite powerful bidding, may furnish material for a slam try; a power-house, opposite repeated signs-off may wind up at a part-score contract.

Note the sudden access of strength in the bidding of the North player in today's hand.

North, dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Akbitzer walked out of the room after North's bid of five hearts. "I can't bear to watch such overbidding," she said. "That man had a bare opening bid and now he thinks he has enough for a slam-try."

She didn't stay long enough, for South accepted the invitation and made a lay-down slam. North's "overbid" was a perfect example of intelligent revaluation in the light of the bidding.

South's jump to three spades set North to thinking. A simple bid of two spades, a "reverse," would have shown a strong hand; the jump indicated a holding of at least 2½ honor-tricks and strong intermediates. Since the bid invited a major-suit game, a large portion of the strength had to be in the major suits.

That determined, North reconstructed the type of hand South might be expected to have and counted the losers in the combined hands. The slam was cold if South could restrict the loss in the red suits to one trick. Hence his slam invitation of five hearts.

The bid was an easy one for South to read. North's previous failure to raise hearts indicated that his major strength was elsewhere. In the light of his club rebid that should mean solid clubs. He would hardly attach importance to diamond strength, so his remaining strength had to be in spades. The slam was an odds-on-chance and South bid it without further ado.

U. S. People Like Colonial Furniture

Mr. Vernon Giddy Praises Architecture, Furnishings of 18th Century.

Restoration and Copies of Old Pieces, Demand of Cities.

By Malvina Lindsay.

IF YOU COULD live again, which period in the world's history would you choose? The gay and luxurious epoch of Louis XIV, the mentally exciting era of the Elizabethans, the decadent days of pagan Rome, the stuffy and ornate period of Victoria?

Probably none of these. Rather the solid and comfortable times of the eighteenth century. That is, if you are a typical American.

If tastes in furniture and architecture are any criterion, America is steadily reaching back into its colonial past for its way of living. And as time goes on, believes Vernon Geddy, general manager of Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., the spirit of the eighteenth century will hover still more closely about the American home.

Mr. Geddy, who has been in Washington in connection with the showing at a local store of rooms containing authentic reproductions of furniture pieces that are a part of the Williamsburg restoration, thinks that not only American taste but American character finds its truest heritage in the eighteenth century, especially that part of it that produced Colonial America.

"Strength, Simplicity."

"The strength and simplicity of character of these early Americans and their fidelity to right and the ideals of liberty," he said, "have permanently influenced our civilization and will continue to do so."

Mr. Geddy cited an architectural record which showed that in the year 1936 between 30 and 40 per cent of all homes built reflected the colonial influence. He predicted that both in architecture and in interior furnishings the influence of the eighteenth century would remain the most permanent one in this country.

"We have done a lot of reverting back to past eras," he said. "For a time we went in for Victorian gingerbread. Then came the Golden Oak age when we threw away all our fine old mahogany and walnut pieces and bought gaudy new sets. Then came the modernistic era—and, mind you, I am not saying that modern furniture hasn't much to commend it—but now the tendency seems to be firmly turned toward the simplicity and comfort and beauty of the eighteenth century, the Golden Age of furniture."

Williamsburg Furniture.

Eighteenth century furniture—simple, strong and gracious, easy to live with, has an affinity with the American character more than the furniture of any other era, Mr. Geddy believes. That in part may explain, he thinks, the steadily growing interest in Williamsburg furniture—an interest that virtually forced the directors of the restoration project to make arrangements whereby authentic reproduction of their old pieces could be made available commercially.

To carry out this plan the Williamsburg Crafts, Inc, was organized and this group has licensed manufacturers of nine different lines of merchandise—furniture, china, silver, glassware, hardware, pewter, brass, light fixtures and paints—to make authentic reproductions of restoration furnishings. Each article reported is passed upon and given a certificate of authenticity by the Williamsburg Crafts organization before it is placed on sale. Fourteen carefully selected stores in the Eastern part of the United States are distributing this merchandise.

Rooms Shown Here.

In a Washington store a parlor and a dining room furnished with these reproductions transport visitors into the serene, dignified days of the colonial period. The parlor is a reproduction of that in the Raleigh Tavern at Williamsburg.

Not only its comfortable wing chair, its dignified draperies, its graceful secretary and table, its handsome lowboy but even its smallest accessories, its candlesticks, penholder, glass bottle, tea set, are certified reproductions of articles on which Williamsburg investigators have spent years of research in this country and abroad.

The dining room has the typical eighteenth century spaciousness and simplicity. The long, gleaming mahogany table is bare save for a silver bowl and four candles in chaste holders. The sideboard is a copy of one in the Daphne room of the Raleigh Tavern in Williamsburg. The chest is copied from one in a bedroom in the Governor's palace. The room is papered with hand-blocked French paper in buff and blue with soft old red draperies of resist linen.

Machine-age visitors to these rooms seem to speak more softly, walk with more dignity in the presence of the stately furnishings. Their response is a mute testimony to what Mr. Geddy defines as the intangible goal of the Williamsburg restoration—keeping alive the early American spirit by preserving the beauty of its material forms.

Chintz Proves Popular For Curtain or Frock

It probably will be a toss-up whether or not the new summer chintz goes to the window as draperies or to your back as frocks.

Glazed, colorful and perky, this old-fashioned material refuses to take a back seat to any of the new and fancier weaves. It creeps into the style picture periodically but hardly ever has it been seen in more fetching designs than are being shown this season.

Ric-rac trims one of the starring numbers in a New York showing. The frock has a peasant bodice, tightly fitting and puff sleeves, very flattering. The skirt swirls with a generous yardage which adds to its youthful mood. It is designed to be worn at the beaches this summer, but in Miami, where the dress was introduced, it went everywhere except to formal affairs.

America Reaches Back Toward This Simplicity

The stately and gracious tempo of life in colonial Williamsburg is reflected in this parlor, which has been fitted up by a local store with authentic reproductions of furnishings in the Williamsburg restoration project. The hostess for the exhibit is shown in costume of the period. Even the candlesticks and andirons are faithful reproductions of pieces upon which much research has been spent.

Affected Action Often Detracts From Sincerity

By Margaret Wallace.

SOCIAL LIFE often develops mannerisms that violate all rules of good breeding. Women, particularly in their efforts to be charming, often appear affected and insincere. One young Washington man has written of this problem as follows:

"I am engaged to a very nice girl and we hope to marry soon. I am very much embarrassed when we go to public places or to visit relatives or friends by certain mannerisms she affects. She assumes what I suppose she thinks is a 'society manner.' She has a habit of putting her hand on my arm or touching my hand lightly with her finger to emphasize a point. My mother thinks this is very bad manners. Although I am very fond of this girl, I do not like it either, especially when she does the same thing to some of my men friends. Then she has a habit of standing far too close to talk to people. She annoyed my sister very much by toying with her scarf all evening recently at a box party.

"Recently we were guests at a luncheon given by some of our friends at a tea house, where benches instead of chairs were placed at long tables. My fiance pushed over on her bench when she wanted to talk to either of the persons next to her, a man on one side and a girl on the other, until she nearly pushed the girl off of the bench and crowded the man against the wall. She is really of a very sweet and confiding nature, but these mannerisms, all of which are very exaggerated, make her seem artificial. She does not use these when she is with her own family or with me."

It is very rude of persons to put their hands on others in public. This man's sister was quite right in being annoyed at the young girl toying with her scarf all evening. No well-mannered person ever stands or sits too close to another person if it possibly can be avoided.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

NEW YORK, May 19.

IF YOU COME to what some of our civic boosters fondly but I fear fatuously call 'the world's greatest summer resort" during the next few months, you will have to get our fun at the Central Park Zoo or one of the teeming beaches. The Broadway theaters will have on view the flimsiest list of shows in the history of the local stage, I find.

ALICE HUGHES.

Time was, before talkies, when three or four sumptuous girl-and-music extravaganzas ran out the hot spell, popping the eyes of one and all, but those days are gone forever. During the coming summer there will be but one musical show on deck and that a modest affair called 'Babes in Arms," notable only for its Richard Rodgers tunes (you now hear them on the air) and the caperings of young Mitzi Green, once a little mimic of the movies!

Other entertainments slated to battle the local humidity are "The Women," that magnificently horrid cat-show you will all want to see; "You Can't Take It With You," a delightful comedy; "Having Wonderful Time," another and tenderer laugh-opera; "Yes, My Darling Daughter," doggedly witty and with a fine cast; "Excursion," one of the newer comedy hits, and 'Brother Rat," or fun at the Virginia Military Institute. And oh, yes—the perennial and slightly terrible 'Tobacco Road." Total—eight. Whither is the theater drifting?

But, after all, who wants to sweat (an ugly word) in a Times Square theater. Few, even today, are air-conditioned, and most of them are steambaths. Try our big movie houses. They practically guarantee you a case of galloping bronchitis with every 75-cent ticket!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—John Rockefeller is going to open his summer show at his 65-story Wainbow Woom in a fortnight, at which time we are invited to come without evening dress, which I think is right nice of John. The feature will be Mitti Fervar, a cousin of Pola Negri (remember) who is described as a "chanteuse." That's just John's classy language. My bet is that the girl sings . . .

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Heartbroken by Girl's Statement That She No Longer Loves Him, Youth Weeps and Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a young lady for the past three years. I am 18 years old and she is 17. I have always loved her and she has always said she loved me. Her father, however, is not in favor of her going with me because I am a Greek. But that is not my problem. For the past two years, the girl has also been going out with another boy. And yesterday she told me she loved him. But somehow I can't bring myself to believe her, because her words did not carry conviction.

• • • •

Only as recently as last Valentine's Day she sent me a card inscribed with a verse conveying a message of love and at the bottom of the card in her own handwriting were the words, "I mean it." Two weeks ago she wrote me a little note (although I see her practically every other night) saying how much she cared for me. Her exact words were: "I love you, even though I may not show it plainly. I really do."

• • • •

What shall I do? I cried myself to sleep last night, although I slept only two hours. I arose at 2 a. m. and went to my office, where I cried until 6 a. m. I have been reading your column for the past year and hope that you can help me as you have helped others. I am so crazily in love with this girl that I can't put my mind on my work. Though barely 24 hours have elapsed since this problem has confronted me, I don't know what to do.

• • • •

I work daily with the thought that I shall see her. I have been working at my present job for nine months and have been promoted twice with salary raises, and she is indirectly responsible for this, as I had visions of marrying her and wanted to be successful and be able to provide for her and make her happy. Do you think she still loves me? Please answer soon, as I feel I can't go on without this girl. My whole life is tied up in her. BROKEN HEARTED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR BROKEN HEARTED: The first and most important thing to do here is to take the girl's statement like a man. Act like a cry baby (as you are threatening to do) and you will give her double reason for confirming the break. If her words seemed to lack conviction there may yet be hope that she doesn't quite know her own mind; that the tide may turn in your favor, if only you conduct yourself like a man—strong enough to stand up under any reversal or shocking disappointment.

• • • •

It might help you to read Robert Browning's "The Last Ride Together," one of the greatest love poems ever written (in the estimate of William Lyon Phelps), which tells the story of the rejected lover who blesses the name of the girl in pride and thankfulness; proud to love her without hope of union, thankful that he has met and known such a woman.

• • • •

The opening stanza reads thus:

"I said—Then, dearest, since 'tis so,
Since now at length my fate I know,
Since nothing all my love avails,
Since all my life seemed meant for, fails,
Since this was written and needs must be—
My whole heart rises up to bless
Your name in pride and thankfulness-
Take back the hope you gave—I claim
Only a memory of the same,
And this beside, if you will not blame,
You leave for one more last ride with me."

While there is life there is hope. And although the girl contradicts her previous protestations by professing now to love another, she is still five or six years too young to know her own heart with reasonable finality. That is the raft you can cling to for the present, until the black clouds pass and you can see some light ahead. You simply can't afford to have hysterics, abandon your pride, lose your job, go around looking like a disembodied and reproachful ghost, haunting and taunting the girl with the implication that she's ruined your life. Not if you ever expect to win her against heavy odds. Remember that the course of true love never runs smooth; that often it has to cut a channel over, under, around and through many an aforeseen and ominous obstacle before it comes to rest in the quiet pool of contented marriage.

• • • •

Tell the girl that although she may not love you, you still love her and always will, and all you ask now is the privilege of continued friendship. Tell her if she grants you this privilege you will not abuse it; that you are prepared to put aside lovemaking and enjoy her company as often as she will permit on a more impersonal basis. Tell her that her friendship, the inspiration of her society, is infinitely more important to you than any other girl's love could be. If you pull yourself together at once and make this reasonable appeal in an altogether manly, self-controlled way, I cannot believe she will deny it. Your only hope of keeping a toe-hold in her life is by wisely and gracefully adjusting yourself to her change of heart. Continued association alone can provide opportunity for winning back lost ground.

It is possible of course that she has discovered that her interest in you was a mistaken one; that she is irrevocably determined to put you out of her life. And if she resolutely denies you so much as friendship, you have no choice but to pull yourself together and go on without her. And in that event you must remember that only a coward lets a reversal in love ruin his life. By his own actions he is testifying that he was not really worth a woman's love and trust.

The only cure for a broken heart—which the breaker refuses to mend—is to find another heart interest. At 18 it is most unlikely that you met your final fate in the field of women. You will probably be in and out of love half a dozen times, having your heart broken and breaking other hearts in turn, before you find yourself at the altar. But I sympathize deeply with your present agony, and would like to see it relieved. There is no suffering greater than that of adolescent youth in the throes of unrequieted love. I have given you my best advice, and I hope, for your sake, that you follow it to the letter. M. H.

Tomorrow's Problem.

Bitterly disappointed in husband after seven months' marriage, wife hints at causes of her disillusionment and wonders if she is asking too much in soliciting a confidential consideration of her case.

14 Chanel Gowns For Wear at River

Paris.—No one except Chanel would be inspired by the spectacle of luminous fountains to create a group of 14 evening dresses especially for night dining on the banks of the Seine during the 1937 Paris International Exposition.

She noted that many smart restaurants reached out into the river and dining must necessarily be al fresco and thus informal. So she caught something of the play of light and shadow, of music out of doors, of the movement of the water and created the type of dresses that should be worn.

Flowered chiffons, tulles and silver moire were the fabrics, some of them in pale gray with steel paillettes and wings of black tulle—and then she decided her mannequins were to wear the newest Chanel headdresses—a big bow of black moire ribbon or a bunch of red or pink roses on a band of black ribbon. Flowers or bows are worn at the very crown of the head, revealing all the front hair. Over this is thrown a lacy veil, reaching to the shoulders in back and coming down to the tip of the nose in front.

Jewels Are Popular With Beach Clothes

Even with the severest sports ensembles, the smartly dressed woman is wearing jewels. Among the most attractive are the shell bracelets and necklaces, which are worn with summer beach clothes. These can be purchased at the better shops, but a few individuals who want to add a very personal touch have had sets of jewels made from shells which they collected on the beaches at Miami. Shell jewelry need not be confined strictly to sports wear, however.

Youth Problem Solution Need Stressed by First Lady In Talk to Breakfast Session of Political Study Club

Warns That Adults Must Learn to Impart Vision to Young People; Also Discusses Radio Phone Conversation With Oriental Women.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The youth problem today is one for older persons to solve by learning how to "draw young people into the stream of life and impart to them a vision of what they can do to make their period an epoch which has advanced civilization."

This was the message of Mrs. Roosevelt to members of the Political Study Club at whose breakfast at the Mayflower yesterday she was guest of honor and speaker.

"The pioneers of today," she said "must explore with their minds. Imagination, initiative and ability to create new things are necessary; this is as true pioneering as that of the past, but I am not so sure we prepare our children for what they will have to do in this line.

"They go to the movies, the theater, the dance—their recreation is prepared for them and does not help them develop imagination or initiative. The college may not be doing the maximum good either. There is apt to be too much stress on the scholar; the professor who has written scientific books has not necessarily the qualities of a teacher. What young people need is inspiration to find out what they can do and the urge to go out and do it."

Made Honorary Member.

Mrs. Roosevelt, was presented as a new honorary member of the club by the president, Mrs. Tilman Bacon Parks, and introduced by Mrs. Edward Campbell Shields, the program chairman. Because of her telephone conversation in the morning with Mme. Chiang Kai-shek and Mrs. H. H. Kung, celebrating the opening of the new radio telephone line to China, she was unable to be present at the beginning of the luncheon but arrived at the hour of the program.

She mentioned the conversation with the women of the Far East and the hope Mme. Chiang had expressed that through such scientific progress, women in all countries might work together for better and more peaceful living for the sake of the youth of the world.

Mrs. Roosevelt declared her conviction that nursery schools should be part of every public school system, not only to guide the physical and mental development of children in their earliest years, but also to help young mothers to know how to train them. Vocational guidance, she said, was useless unless, through early school years, children had been so taught in school and at home as to bring out in them their natural aptitudes.

Two Soloists Appear.

Preceding and following the address by the First Lady, there were songs by Miss Martha Byrd, soprano, and Mr. William Moran, tenor, accompanied by Edith Virden Smith. The young singers, both with voices of appealing quality, artistically used, sang individual groups before the address and duets following. Mrs. George Oliver Wilingham, chairman of music, presented the artists. The program for the luncheon opened with a salute to the flag, led by Mrs. Lane Schofield.

Mrs. Parks, who is completing her second term as president of the club, wore a sheer frock with a design of white daisies sprinkled over it and forming a border down the front of the jacket blouse. Mrs. Edgar Merritt, newely elected president, who was seated beside her, wore an all-yellow costume, and Mrs. Shields was in a powder-blue sheer frock, with a long matching cape over the dress.

Among others at the head table was Representative Mary T. Norton, an honorary member of the club and chairman of the District Committee. She talked briefly on the proposed abattoir, and, at the close of her talk, the club unanimously passed a motion proposed by Mrs. Cabot Stevens, that it go on record as "unalterably opposed to a slaughter-house in or near the District."

Others at Table.

Others beside Representative Norton at the table were Izetta Jewel Miller, Mrs. Charles Haig, State regent of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, president of the Woman's National Democratic Club; Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Frank Mondel, first vice president of the League of Republican Women; Mrs. Edward E. Gann, Dr. Ella R. Fales, Mrs. Gillingham, Mrs. P. Lee Hodges, Mrs. Edgar Boyd Kay, Mrs. William A. Kinnan, first vice president of the club, who sat at the right of Mrs. Roosevelt; Mrs. Wintemute Sloan, Mrs. J. W. Peabody, Mrs. Z. D. Blackistone, Mrs. Schofield, Mrs. Philip Matz, Mrs. Mary Ford Adams, and Mrs. Needham Turnage.

Pages for the luncheon were the Misses Marie Keen Hayes, a student at Holy Cross Academy, and Mary Naomi Peabody, who attends Immaculata Seminary.

The club colors, gold and blue, were carried out in the decorations, blue cornflowers and yellow snapdragons and daisies.

'Book Day' Held For Incurables

Soroptimists Bring Gifts For Library to Be Installed at Home.

BOOK DAY, where every member of the Washington Soroptimist Club contributed books to a library to be installed in the Home for Incurables, was observed at the club's luncheon held yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

The program, in charge of Mrs. Betsy Fisher, pianist for the club, took on a literary atmosphere. The honor guests and speakers were Mr. Pendleton Hogan, author, and Mrs. Ruberta Martin.

Mr. Hogan gave an interesting talk on the differences between the short story and the novel, pointing out that a short story, in his opinion, was harder to write because it left so much to the imagination, but that the noval contributed to a more lasting reputation to the author. Mrs. Martin gave a book review on Dale Carnegie's "How to Win Friends and to Know People From an Individual Standpoint."

Mrs. Martin drew a line of distinction between the trend of thought before the World War, that of the individual, and since the war, that of state.

Mrs. Jewell Downs brought to the club luncheon Enid Mitchell, soprano, who gave several vocal selections.

Guests there were Miss Doris Tempest, of the Leeds, England Soroptimist Club; Mrs. Marie Waverton, of the Detroit Soroptimist Club; Goldie Holland, of Washington, the guest of Mrs. Edith Martin, and Mrs. Perry Arnold Lorburg, the guest of Elva McNamara, Soroptimist. Mrs. Lorburg talked to the members on her recent book on "A Woman's Approach to Business."

COOKIES, LIKE GOOD DEEDS, are paving the way for the success of the Girl Scout movement in Washington. The annual cookie sale, in charge of Mrs. Donald Richberg, has just been completed but the returns are not all in as there are sales made by 2,000 little girls to be checked, and that takes time.

Last year they disposed of 40,000 pounds of cookies to members of their families and friends—for sales are restricted to these—with a profit of $2,200 which paid off the camp debt and sent several children to summer camp as well.

Last year the children from orphanages, who had no opportunity to sell as had the girls with families, were taken to the large department stores and, with Girl Scout leaders, conducted booths for a day. In the beginning they were shy but by the time the day was over, they were talking freely with their patrons and doing all kinds of helpful errands for people about the store.

One little girl held a woman's bundles for her at the drinking fountain. When the woman thanked her the child looked up with a serious face and replied, "Oh, thank YOU, now I've got my good deed done."

THE DEMOCRATIC WOMEN'S NATIONAL COUNCIL, which has a membership of 900 women from all parts of the country, is exemplifying its broad scope this year with new officers—each from a different State. The president, Mrs. H. A. E. Lees, of Oregon.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSIONER Lucille Foster McMillin was among the distinguished guests at the breakfast of the Political Study Club yesterday, but Government affairs were not the topic of her conversation—she was talking about the circus. Like the rest of us, she "just adores circuses" and had attended the night before with Humphrey Dulens, of Westport, Conn., a young author who is at present writing stories of circus life. She loved the animals and the flying trapezes n'everything.

MAYBE it's because money talks. Anyway, Mrs. James McClintock started her career by studying languages, preparing to teach them—she speaks four—and has wound up by being comptroller of the American Association of University Women. When she was in school she shunned mathematics; took only those required for graduation and now she looks after all the funds of the association with its 53,000 members, including their dues, the funds of the fellowships, eight of which were given this year; those for maintenance of the clubhouse and for the countless other activities of the organization.

Veterans Are Entertained At White House Fete

Cabinet Members Receive With President and First Lady; William Trantham Steals Show With Lariat Exhibition.

Again the scarlet and white striped marquees added a note of color to the south lawn of the White House, and again the Marine Band—this time in snappy blue and white uniforms—played lively military airs as the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were hosts to the veterans at the third of a series of garden parties.

The host and hostess received 900 guests in front of the south portico, while their granddaughter, small Chandler Roosevelt, watched from the "porch" above. To her a uniform meant one thing. Soldiers, sailors, marines, nurses—everyone in uniform was to her a "soldier."

When guests had finished greeting the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Chandler decided it was time to take part in activities. Down the steps and across the lawn she ran to join her grandparents just as they were getting into the big touring car that carried them through the White House grounds and to the platform where the program was given.

Greeted by Cabinet

Previously, in a receiving line all their own, Cabinet members and Cabinet wives greeted guests. In the line were the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, and the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Gen. and Mrs. Malin Craig and Admiral and Mrs. William D. Leahy.

Interest yesterday was centered, not so much in distinguished guests, however, as in men and women wearing uniforms. Soldiers, sailors, gray ladies of the Red Cross, the blue-garbed canteen corps, the white-clad Army nurses with olive drab capes swinging around their shoulders, the scarlet-lined navy blue capes and the maroon-lined black capes of the Navy nurses; the green, pink and yellow costumes of staff and health aides, and the gray uniforms of the motor corps—all these mingling with Army and Navy uniforms on the White House lawn made the event one of the most colorful parties of the season.

Trantham Steals Show.

But, if anybody stole the show, it was a booted and spurred gray-haired "cowboy," William "Lariat" Trantham, from the Soldiers' Home, who proved his prowess at rope tricks while the band played and the crowd looked on. Six singers from the Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla., also were on the program during the afternoon.

Among the guests, who mingled with the veterans and the members of the Junior League who assisted, were Mrs. Schamyl Cochran, Miss Ellen Boyden, Miss Mabel Boardman, Miss Margaret Lower, Representative Edith Nourse Rodgers, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Miss Mary Win Brown, Br. James Alexander Lyons, Mrs. James J. Davis, Miss Gertrude Laughlin, the Solicitor General and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Miss Jane Culbertson and Miss Olivia Stokes.

Uruguayan Finance Minister Honored at Reception Given by Envoy

Sunburned, personable and looking far too youthful to have held two cabinet posts in his country, Dr. Cesar Charlone, Minister of Finance of Uruguay, was guests of honor at a reception given yesterday by the Minister of Uruguay, Mr. Jose Richling.

Dr. Charlone does not speak English, but his French is flawless; and so are his manners. This is his first visit to the United States, and he will be here until Wednesday.

The reception was held at the Carlton, where Dr. Richling lives. Mrs. Cordell Hull, who also makes her home there, was one of the first arrivals. Other "Cabinet ladies" present were Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, in a spring print and a flower-trimmed hat, and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, who came with her husband, the Secretary of Commerce.

A long table in the center of the room was set with elaborate delicacies Washingtonians have come to expect at Latin-American parties. But there was one unexpected addition, a new type of cocktail—the "Lily Pons" concocted by Dr. Richling himself, who graciously informed all inquiriers that it was a mixture of Italian wine ("grappa") and French Dubonnet.

During the reception, Mr. Paulo Hasslocher, commercial attache of the Brazilian Embassy and a close friend of the Minister, was busy introducing people. Among those seen at the party were the Mexican Ambassador, Senor Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera; the Minister of Guatemala, Senor Dr. Don Adrian Recinos; the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Fuentes.

Also there were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, the Attache of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Schlatter, Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the solicitor general; Senator and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, Mrs. Peyton March, Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, Mme. Hurban, wife of the Minister of Czechoslovakia; Frau Thomsen, of the German Embassy; the Minister of the Irish Free State, Mr. Michael McWhite; the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, the Marquis of Sant Orsola; Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mr. Julius Holmes, of the State Department; Mr. Paul Daniels and the economic adviser of the State Department and Mrs. Feis.

Mexican Ambassador and Wife Leave To Attend Trade Group Dinner in Dallas

The Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, accompanied by their youngest son, Master Guillermo, left Washington last evening for Dallas, Tex., where the envoy will be the guest of honor at a banquet to be given by the Dallas Chamber of Commerce in connection with the Pan-American Exposition and the Foreign Trade Week. From there the envoy and his family will go to the border for a brief visit before returning to Washington at the end of the month.

The Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, returned to Washington yesterday by plane from Havana. He will receive the Cuban colony of Washington today at noon. At that same time he will present the decorations of the Order of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, which he brought back from his homeland, to Senator William H. King, Representative Sol Bloom and Mr. Hugh H. Obear.

This evening the Ambassador will be host at a large reception in celebration of the independence of the island republic.

Senator Tom Connally was host at a dinner party at the Shoreham last evening for his son, Mr. Ben Connally, of Houston, Tex., who has arrived for a week's visit in the Capital.
Morris, of Houston, Tex.

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, has issued invitations to a buffet supper Sunday evening at 6:30 at her home, 3001 Woodland drive.

The American Ambassador to the Argentine and Mrs. Alexander Weddell will be week-end guests of Mrs. Edward R. Stettinius at her home at Locust Valley, Long Island. Mr. and Mrs. Weddell will go to England before returning to Buenos Aires. They have been spending several weeks at their estate near Richmond.

Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin returned to Washington yesterday after spending the past week in Boston.

Garden Tour Set Next Week

Miss Hahm's Bonnie Brae One of Highlights of Trip.

ROSE GREELY, landscape artist, has done one of her most charming pieces of work in the gardens of Bonnie Brae, the home of Miss Emma Hahm, on Daniels road. The gardens will be shown in the tour of Chevy Chase Garden Clubs on Tuesday, May 25.

Set in seclusion among the trees of Rock Creek Park, the gardens of Bonnie Brae combine a variety of beauties. An octagonal pool, in a bower of flowers and overlooked by walls of shrubbery, is given a quaint accent by the figure of a child playing a flute. On another side, blossoming plants tumble over a low rock wall and add color to curving stone steps.

Gardens Listed.

Among the formal gardens included in the tour are those of Mrs. William S. Corby, at 9 Chevy Chase Circle; Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, at Linnean avenue and Upton street, Greenacre, home of Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffman. The roses in the garden of Mr. Whitman Cross will be at their best. Those interested in peonies wi ll find them in profusion in the garden of Mrs. George P. McCabe.

Included in the tour also is the old Brook Farm house, home of Mrs. Frank H. Shultz, with its stone-paved terraces and rocky pool and its rooms furnished in old pine, cherry and mahogany, true to its period. At the tea house adjoining, a special luncheon at a moderate price will be served to guests on the tour who wish it, and tea may be had there also. For the convenience of guests taxis may be had at Chevy Chase Circle, running every hour on the hour.

Tour Committee.

Heading the garden tour committee is Mrs. John A. Selby, Mrs. Richard Fay Jackson is the president of the club. Other members of the committee are Mrs. Robert Ash, Mrs. Jennings Bailey, Mrs. John Barr, Mrs. Conway Coe, Mrs. Arthur Derfenderfer, Mrs. Robert F. Fleming, Mrs. Alfred Fowler, Mrs. George P. McCabe, Mrs. Grace E. McEwen, Mrs. James W. Murphy and Mrs. H. H. Semmes.

The pilgrimage is for the benefit of the Montgomery County Social Service League, which for 30 years has done fine work in the county, especially in the care of children. In case of rain, the tour will be held on the following day, May 26.

Plan Poetry Festival.

Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler will preside at the third poetry festival this evening at the Arts Club, when the prizes in the rondeau contest will be awarded. Maurice Jarvis and Esther Waldron will read the prize poems as well as other new poems.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

APPARENTLY Washington is different from other cities in its attitude toward society members who go on the stage or screen. Beth Thompson, for instance, has been making quite a name for herself on the other side of the footlights, but there's no indication she will be dropped from the blue book list. On the other hand, little Jane Wyatt, daughter of the Christopher Wyatts, of New York City, found herself neatly plucked from the register the very moment she was heralded with success in such stage performances as "The Vinegar Tree," "Give Me Yesterday," and "Dinner at Eight."

Last February, however, she married the socially prominent Edgar Bethune Ward, so the Register forgave her her trespasses and back she went into the pages. "Lost Horizon," now playing at the National, is little Jane's sixth film and she is making a whooping success of it.

NOW, AFTER everyone else has faithfuly promised to pipe down about the coronation, we shall have our last lick at the brilliant ceremony. Not all people stayed in London, as well we know, and now we might add, not all people stayed in England. A special chartered plane brought people from Paris in time to see the gorgeous spectacle and returned them to their Parisian habitats in time for dinner. Among those who were more or less up in the air about it were the Countess de Chambrun, whom we know as the former Clara Longworth, her daughter-in-law, Countess Rene de Chambrun, who before her marriage last year was Jose Laval; Mrs. Alice Bowler-Kelly, Mme. Raymond Patenotre and Prince Edward Lobkowicz.

MRS. JOHN GUIDER has all of her summer plans very well mapped out at this point. Early next month she with her children are departing for Adair, their lovely place at Littleton, N. H. In the meantime the in between days are not merely a collection of hours of packing and shopping for summer clothes, no indeed! As a matter of fact she and the head of the Guider house are taking a group of friends to the Smith College Club production of the Buntling Ball at Pierce Hall this evening. Eileen O'Daniel is another entertaining before the performance of the rollicking Victorian comedy, and will be hostess at a good sized dinner party.

Thrift Shop Party Is Set Tomorrow

Charity Group Observing Eighth Birthday With Program in Store.

Everyone has been asking, "What about the Thrift Shop's annual benefit?" And the answer came in the guise of a penny postcard from the shop's chairman, Mrs. John R. Williams, reading, "Please send us a nice white elephant. Mark it with your name for special sale."

For instead of the customary big benefit, always one of the most amusing parties on the spring calendar, Mrs. Williams is celebrating the eighth birthday of her little shop with a tea and "white elephant" party at the shop, 425 Tenth street, tomorrow afternoon, from 3 to 6 o'clock. Washington has been deluged with so many benefits for worthy causes that it seems better to give the usual party in the fall.

During the eight years since its founding, the Thrift Shop, whose slogan is "We turn your trash into cash," has earned $110,000 for its five member organizations the Children's Country Home, the Children's Hospital, the Child Welfare, Columbia Hospital and the Junior League for its social service department. The shop boasts no debts. It has no capital investment, no stockholders, no mortgage interest to pay. From thousands of homes articles of every kind and description are sent in every day throughout the year. The well stocked shelves and cases are evidence of its hosts of friends, its earnings of its business-like management. Last year $13,000 was divided among its five member organizations.

With the approach of summer, Washington's sick and convelescent children will need little luxuries, additional comforts, and so the proceeds from the birthday party tomorrow will go toward this happiness fund. There will be tea and cakes, all sorts of good things for which the shop's special food department is famous. In addition, the hordes of "white elephants" which have been arriving at the shop will be on sale, fascinating gadgets of every kind and description.

Miss Nielsen Wed To Eugene Dawson

Miss Thelma Nielsen, daughter of Mrs. William C. Hushing, of Washington, was married at 6 o'clock last evening to Mr. Eugene G. Dawson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Dawson. The ceremony took place at the Brightwood Park Church, the Rev. S. Carroll Coale officiating.

After a wedding trip Mr. Dawson and his bride will reside at 1218 Decatur street.

"Did you ever see a dream on Seventh Street?
I DID!"

"Just a few paces off the matter-of-fact sidewalks of Seventh Street, I found myself, like Alice in Wonderland, in a modern dreamworld of furniture beauty. To say there's nothing like it in Washington under one roof is putting it mildly. I doubt if there's any assortment anywhere to equal in charm, distinction, finesse and sheer loveliness the Mazor Masterpieces I saw. You can't even THINK of buying furniture until you've seen them. Tenth Anniversary of Lindbergh's Historic Flight to Paris

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

"SPIRIT OF ST. LOUIS" TAKES OFF, MAY 20, 1927, 8 A. M.
Ten years ago today, the young, little known, former air mail pilot, lifted his silver monoplane from Curtis Field, Long Island, and headed toward Paris, landing at Le Bou rget Field 33½ hours later, completing what was then the longest flight in aviation history—3,610 miles—modestly he explained to the nearest of cheering thousands that greeted him, "Well, we made it." At left, he is shown as he first arrived at Curtis Airport, May 12, on the second leg of his trancontinental journey from San Diego, Calif. At right, portrait of the noted flier made a few days before he flew to Paris.

AT LE BOURGET FIELD. The large, enthusiastic crowd gathered at the French airport broke through lines of soldiers and gendarmes as soon as it heard the drone of Lindbergh's plane. The "Spirit of St. Louis" is in the background surrounded by the throng. The whole world hailed the flier as the symbol of clean and daring youth and he was feted everywhere.

AT FRENCH AERO CLUB. Charles A. Lindbergh standing on the balcony of the Paris club waving the American flag and French tricolor while cheering crowds packed the streets and wildly acclaimed him.

BROADWAY'S WELCOME. The paper "storm" that greeted the pilot's return to New York City. Lower Broadway was turned white with the shower of ticker tape that drifted down from the tall skyscrapers, while Lindbergh perched at the back of an open car waved to his well wishers.

SPORTS — The Washington Post — SPORTS

Card Hurler, Ripple Start Free-for-All

Players of Both Teams Get in on Fight Before It Is All Over.

By Whitney Martin,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

St. Louis, May 19.—It was billed as the "battle of the country," but the 26,399 fans lured to Sportsmen's Park today to watch Jerome (Dizzy) Dean try to stop the winning streak of Carl Hubbell had no idea the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Giants would take it too literally.

Almost lost in the turmoil of a free-for-all brawl which boiled over infield and overflowed into the outfield, with practically all the players participating, was the fact that King Carl turned in his twenty-second consecutive victory, 4 to 1, with another hurling masterpiece.

The game packed drama from the start, the tension increasing inning by inning to an anti-climax in the sixth when a balk called on Dizzy was followed by a three-run Giant splurge and prolonged verbal outbursts from the Cards directed at Umpire George Barr.

In the eighth Jimmy Ripple, Giant centerfielder, was forced to pancake to escape one of Dizzy's fast ones. Dean was working with a taped right thumb, which made an occasional delivery go off on a tangent like a wild discus throw, but the Giants chose to believe the Card ace was dusting them off.

Ripple bunted down the first base line to draw Dean to the bag. The first attempt was foul. The second was juggled by Second Baseman Brown, and Ripple was safe. But as the two met at the bag they came together as by appointment.

Dean, Ripple Start Fight.

The free-for-all broke out in the Giants' half of the ninth, with Dean and Jimmy Ripple, Giants' sophomore outfielder, starting the swinging. When things quieted down, the Giants scored their final run, Ripple getting credit for a single and coming home on a pinch double by Harry Danning.

The fight started after Ripple apparently had been thrown out at first base in a play in which Dean went over to help Johnny Mize cover the bag.

As soon as they started swinging, the whole Giant team came out of the dugout and swung into action with the Cardinals, who were already on hand.

Umpires and uniformed city policemen jumped into the fray.

Virtually every member of both squads took part in the fist-throwing affair. Gus Mancuso and Mickey Owen, the catchers, went at each other, and Hal Schumacher, Giant pitcher, was in the Giant group that tangled with Dean and a few of the Cards.

Riot Lasts Ten Minutes.

It was more than ten minutes before the fighting could be stopped and the warring factions pried apart. The riot was a culmination of much jawing and bitter feeling between the two clubs all afternoon, furnishing a sidelight to the pitching duel betwee.. Dean and Hubbell.

When things quieted down somewhat, Mancuso and Owen were put out of the game.

The bitter feeling had been climaxed just before the fight started. Ripple had shouted to Dean that he was going to bunt down the first base line—and he did. But on the pitch before he hit, Dean had forced him to fall down to get away from a "duster" that came close to his head.

When the war ended it was learned Ripple had not been put out, but was safe on first, since Mize, in the melee, had failed to touch the bag with the throw from Second Baseman Jim Brown. As a result Ripple was credited with a single, and scored the Giants' fourth run when Dean hit Johnny McCarthy on the elbow with a pitched ball, and Harry Danning, pinch-hitting for Mancuso, doubled to left to bring the tally across.

Ogrodowski Goes In.

The Giants went out in front, 3 to 1, with a 3-run splurge in the sixth. Whitehead opened with a single and was sacrificed along by Hubbell. Bartell flied to short left, but the umpire ruled Dean had balked, and advancing Whitehead to third, directed Bartell to bat again.

Dean threw his glove in the air, banged the ball on the mound and made a gesture as if quitting the game, but after he and the rest of the Cards had argued for a time, the game was resumed. Bartell lined to Pepper Martin, who dropped the ball for an error, scoring Whitehead. Chiozza and Jojo Moore hit consecutive singles, with Bartell and Chiozza scoring on the Moore safety.

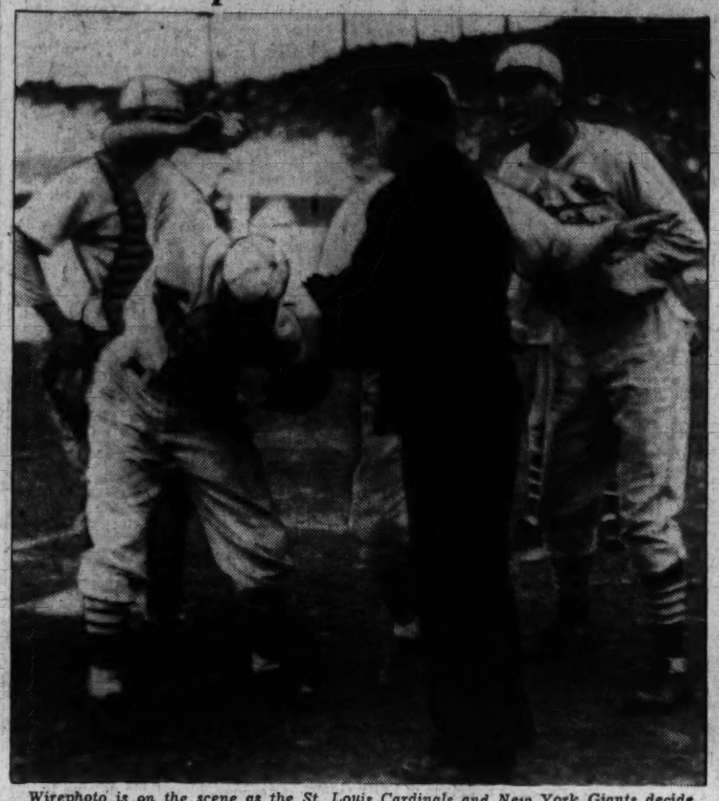
Wirephoto: Camera Records Action as Fists, Gloves, Bats Fly in Riot Between Cardinals and Giants



Wirephoto is on the scene as the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Giants decide to settle their feud with fists, gloves, bats and any handy little implement that might serve the purpose. In the above shot Leo Durocher, Cardinal captain, is throwing the ball to the ground, giving vent to anger after Umpire Barr called a balk on Dean—the spark that touched off the dynamite. Dizzy, at the right, is giving the boys his usual verbal lashing. Mickey Owen, Card catcher, is at the left.

This Wirephoto shows the rival catchers, Gus Mancuso, of the Giants, and Owen wrestling on the ground while Joe Medwick (No. 7), Cardinal outfielder, is one of those attempting to separate them. The free-for-all broke out in the Giants' half of the ninth inning when Jimmy Ripple, New York sophomore outfielder, got credit for a single, after Dean had gone over to help Johnny Mize cover first on a play in which Ripple apparently was out. Dean and Ripple were the first to start swinging but the rioting soon became general and lasted 10 minutes. As an aftermath Mancuso and Owen were ejected from the game.

Nats Whip Browns, 9-8, Despite Five-Run Rally in Ninth Inning

By Shirley Povich.

In an uproarious ninth inning in which Buck (Never a Dull Moment) Newsom was fit to be tied—and, in fact, almost was despite his 9-to-3 lead—the Nats staggered to another one-run victory over the Browns yesterday.

They won the game, 9 to 8, but there was grave doubt how it would all end in that ninth when Big Newsom, who had been pitching five-hit ball, suddenly started pitching his centerfield special.

He gave up six hits in that ninth before he retired to an early shower with his six-run lead all but wiped out and the tying run on base.

Joe Cascarella finally got the side out, but not before the Browns made it seven hits for the inning and had that tying run nicely poised on third base—with the potential winning run on first.

It was a pretty horrible affair for Newsom—that ninth. He didn't find much to get excited about when Rollie Hemsley began the inning with a single, especially after he struck out Carey, the next hitter. But then Big Buck began to pitch that centerfield scramball and there was some fun—for the Browns.

Pinch Hitter Jim Bottomley singled to center, and then Harry Davis whacked a long fly to center. Then Sammy West rapped a long double to center and then Joe Vosmik thumped a single to center. Then Beau Bell banged a two-bagger to center and then Harland Clift bashed a two-bagger to center.

Then Manager Bucky Harris wiggled his finger in the direction of Newsom and sent him downstairs, calling in Cascarella to take up the pitching from that point.

But the Browns already had five runs across and Clift was on first base. Cascarella was no immediate succes, pitching a single to Bill Knickerbocker that shoved Clift around to third with that tying run. And the folks in the grandstand as well as the Nats were, indeed, fit to be tied.

But it all ended happily. Hemsley, who had begun the thing with his hit at the start of the ninth, drove a high fly to Johnny Stone in rightfield and Stone gathered it in and Washington had the ball game—finally.

Washington won the ball game because the Nats mauled four St. Louis pitchers for 18 hits and gave Newsom a lead that at one time read 9 to 1. They jammed all of their scoring into the first four innings, starting off with a five-run barrage against Jim Walkup and Russ Van Atta in the first.

The right-handed Walkup had a horrible time getting the Nats out in that first inning. In fact, the second out of the inning was Walkup himself. Manager Hornsby took him out after he had pitched hits to four of the first five men to face him.

Ben Chapman launched the proceedings in that first with a single to center, and scampered all the way to third when Sammy West permitted the ball to skid through his legs. Buddy Lewis bashed a double to left and Stone duplicated that stunt. When Simmons singled to left, Van Atta made his appearance in the box.

He got Buddy Myer out, but Ossie Bluege greeted him with a triple over West's head and Walter Millies showed Van Atta a double to center, to drive over the fifth run of the inning.

That's the way it went, the Nats scoring in all of the first four innings. Al Simmons did tolerably well at bat—rapping out three singles and a towering triple to the flagpole. And Ben Chapman also had a large afternoon, with a pair of singles and a pair of two-baggers.

The Browns didn't get a hit off Newsom until the fourth. They were saving up for that ninth, I guess.

The Durable Duseks Return To Do Battle in Arena Ring

The Durable Duseks will cut up a few touches—and a few opponents—at Turner's Arena tonight.

Rudy, Joe, Ernie and Wally Dusek, the roughest quartet in the modern mat business, have been brought to Washington to provide a gala night of thud and blunder for the wrestle addicts.

Ernie, who will headline the show, has drawn Wee Willie Davis, the Vast Virginian, as an opponent. Ernie's eyes were almost gouged out in a bout with Cliff Olson not so long ago. Tonight will mark the first time he has worked in a Capital ring since the injury.

Davis, a big bruiser from nearby Virginia, is a villain of the first water. It has long been his ambition to flop a Dusek, just to prove how rough he really is.

Jumping Joe Dusek, youngest of the brothers, will engage Joe Cox, the terrible-tempered bad man from Kansas, in a semifinal scheduled to last 30 minutes.

Rudy Dusek, senior member of the brawling brotherhood, has been relegated to a preliminary bout on this show. He will work against Gino Garibaldi, the Italian Apple-Knocker. Gino has not showed in Washington since last January, when Dean Detton, the title claimant, tossed him.

Entry for P. G. A. Breaks Records

New York, May 19 (AP).—Subject to a recount, all records for the number of entries in the National Open golf championship have been broken by about 100.

The entry list for the 1937 championship to be played at the Oakland C. C., Detroit, June 10, 11, 12, closed last night with well over 1,300 names. The record for the event, 1,277, was set last year.

Yoder Fails to Qualify as Burnett's 72 Takes Manor Medal

Hollebaugh Shoots 75, Rippy a 76

Louis Fuchs Takes Nine on First Hole, But Qualifies.

By Merrell Whittlesey.

Volney Burnett's 72 withstood the challenge of some 200 golfers yesterday and won the medal in the qualifying round of Manor's fifth invitation tournament. The slippery greens continued to take their toll of top-flight golfers and among the casualties was Levi Yoder, the recent winner at Chevy Chase and Woodmont, defending champion and favorite.

Scores of 79 qualified for the first flight whereas in the last tourney, in 1935, some 50 golfers were able to break 80 on the Norbeck layout. Luther Steward, Forest Thompson and Dr. H. L. Smith were among the low handicap men to join Yoder out of first flight consideration. Yoder was out in 43, eight over par, and failed to turn in a card on the back nine.

The high spot of yesterday's play was the card of Louis Fuchs, of Indian Spring, who took 9 blows on the first hole, five over par, took a bogie 6 on the third and another two over par 6 on the fifth, but still qualified for the first flight. He scored ten 4's in succession starting with the ninth hole.

Fuchs drove in the woods on the first hole, played safe and knocked his third in a trap, he played out of the trap back into the woods, reached the green in two more and three-putted for a 9. It rivaled his performance at Woodmont where he has par in for the medal on the eleventh tee, but took 8 and 7 and picked up before the last hole.

Claude Rippy, the public links runner-up, shot a 76 yesterday, a stroke behind Russ Hollebaugh who scored the lowest round of the day, a 75, aided by a one over par 36 on the back nine. Rippy played the woods nine in 37 and needed a par 35 to tie Burnett for the medal, but soared to 38 on the second nine. Everett Johnson, of Beaver Dam, also scored 76.

A playoff loomed with 18 golfers scoring 79 and under and Fuchs, Spencer Overton, Max Taylor, Sam Harvey and J. W. Harvey of the host club were tied at 79 with T. N. Beavers of the host club and R. J. Marks, but Beavers and Marks failed to make an appearance and were drawn into the second flight.

Yoder, playing with Rippy, was a marked man as he tried for a clean sweep among the Invitation affairs but his shots were not clicking and the Kenwood ace was never seriously in the running.

Scores of 88 were drawn for a fifth flight berth. Five flights were paired for match play.

Carleton Halts Dodgers, Cubs Triumph, 3-1

Allows Six Hits in Debut; Tight in Pinches; Lin Frey Batting Star.

Chicago, May 19 (AP).—Tex Carleton made his 1937 starting debut a successful one today as he pitched the Cubs to a six-hit 3-to-1 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Although the Cubs also were held to half a dozen safeties by Harry Eisenstat and Luke Hamlin, they made more of their scoring opportunities. The Dodgers left ten men on the base paths, while the Cubs stranded only four.

Carleton has been out of action with a chipped elbow bone since the spring training trip, his only appearance being a short relief hitch last week. Also returning from the hospital list today were the Cubs' Billy Jurges and Gabby Hartnett and the Dodgers' ace third sacker, Joe Stripp.

Georgetown Prep, Roosevelt Tied

Roosevelt's Rough Riders and Georgetown Prep battled to an 11-inning 4-4 tie yesterday at Roosevelt stadium, The Rough Riders, victorious over Central Tuesday, apparently suffered a severe letdown as an inevitable consequence of their first inter-high win, for their game with the weak-hitting, generally impotent Little Hoyas indicated such. Although diminutive Toddy Lagos pounded the ball with vim for three safeties, Roosevelt was unable to tally that deciding marker in the extra innings. Lefty Bauer hurled for the Riders, while Ed Cummings and Billy Kelly shared the mound burden for the Georgetowners.

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Out in Detroit Mr. Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Tigers, denied with some vehemence the other day that he was employing detectives to shadow his ball players and professed to be profoundly shocked at the very suggestion.

He made the denial specifically in the case of Schoolboy Rowe, the celebrated convalescent of the Tigers' pitching staff who, according to reports, had been doing the bulk of his training in Detroit night clubs.

POVICH.

It seems that the Schoolboy had left his fast ball behind somewhere each time he went out to pitch for the Tigers this season and Manager Mike Cochrane was no little nettled. In fact, Manager Cochrane suspended Schoolboy without pay, until further notice.

Then, very naturally, the scurrilous rumors anent too much night life on Rowe's part gathered circulation, as rumors will, and there were dark hints that Mr. Briggs' detectives had made very positive identification of some of Detroit's better ball players in some of Detroit's better night clubs.

* * * *

Thus it was that Mr. Briggs was prompted to deny that he was employing house dicks to tag his athletes. But he needn't have appeared so downright shocked at the idea. It's an old big league custom!

* * * *

As recently as last season, the Yankees cheerfully admitted that a detective was in their employ for the sole purpose of checking on the after-dark activities of Lefty Gomez whose pitching at the time was something less than all right.

* * * *

And the late Jawn McGraw made no bones about the dicks in the Giants' employ. In fact, McGraw himself, personally, never shrank from knocking on the players' doors at 11 p. m. on any given night to learn for himself whether they were properly checked in—and tucked in.

* * * *

The good Mr. Briggs may take some pride in his statements that the Detroit club does not hold its athletes under suspicion, but in the past Detroit officials have not been completely innocent in the matter. In fact, it is a matter of record that the Tigers used to hire detectives to shadow their players.

Ty Cobb admitted it. Down in the files of the United States Board of Tax Appeals there is a statement by Cobb to that effect.

* * * *

Cobb was manager of the Detroit club when he was appealing an income tax case in 1926. And among the items which he listed as necessary expense to his job as the Tigers' pilot was one which he presented thusly:

"Payment to detectives and hotel watchmen for observing players at time of retiring, $525."

* * * *

So Mr. Briggs need not be so deeply shocked.

That was a very interesting appeal that Cobb made in his income tax case. If you think the job of managing a big league ball club is all income and no outgo, listen to this as Cobb listed it:

* * * *

"Tips obliged to expend as manager during year for hotel porters, bell boys, messengers and Pullman porters, $625."

* * * *

And Cobb pointed out, too, at the time, that a big league manager was expected to entertain, and quite royally, also. How is this for an item as listed by the former Detroit manager:

There was nothing cheap, either about Cobb's equipment on the field, as we learn from this item:

* * * *

"Baseball shoes, gloves and paraphernalia, $150."

And those kids who come hitchhiking into a big league training camp, uninvited and unwanted, are also an added expense to the club manager, according to Cobb who listed this also:

* * * *

"To boys who report to the club unauthorized and can't pay expenses, $190."

But, to return to the business of shadowing ball players, the Washington club has never expended a dime in that direction ever since Clark C. Griffith took the team over 25 years ago.

* * * *

"If you have the kind of ball players who have to be watched, you're not going to get anywhere anyway," said Griffith yesterday. "It's a waste of money.

"We don't have to watch our ball players. They know the rules. In bed by midnight—not merely in their rooms, but in bed. If they cheat on us, it's easy to tell the next day out there on the field. If they don't behave, they show it out there when they try to play."

Quantico, Va., May 19.—Georgetown's undefeated baseball team landed on the Marines here this afternoon, blew their defense to bits with a 28-hit attack, and marched triumphantly off with a 23-to-1 victory. It was the worst defeat in the Leathernecks' history.

Hagerstown Feature to OldGelding

Ancient Son of Trojan Takes Potomac Race at Little Track.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown Race Track, May 19. Handley, an ancient gelded son of Trojan, and a handy old horse around the half-mile circuits, ran one of his good races this afternoon and annexed the Potomac Edison Purse, outstanding event on today's program here. Mrs. R. K. Yingling, of Towson, Md., owner of Handley, came in for a share of the glory, for it was she who trained the gelding and saddled him for the 5-furlong race.

Handley came down to the wire two lengths in advance of Mrs. C. M. Feltner's Easter Herald, the favorite in the limit field of eight. Another length back was W. Barr's Monocacy.

Jockey Cecil Coffman turned in a nice job of piloting the 7-year-old winner. He was not lured into the battle for the early pace as Tom's Boy and Nora's Grace struggled around the first turn. However, on the backstretch, he asked Handley for speed and got enough to go to the top.

Easter Herald had been having some trouble, but once clear came with a rush on the outside. The Feltner horse had too much taken out of him reaching contention and failed to menace his easy running rival.

Handley stepped the route in 1:01 2-5 and paid a $13.10 mutuel.

The daily double shrunk considerably when compared to the $504.70 of yesterday. However, it was a substantial sum and a joy to those who collected the $99.10. Heart Play, a $30.80 shot and Shanteb, a $5.30 favorite, contributed their speed to combination of "six and eight."

Great Loss, ridden by Jockey Johnny Shanks, turned in a smart effort in winning the third race. The son of Gallant Fox handed a beating to the favored Tuleyries Star and Justa Jimmie and belied his name by bringing a $25.25 mutuel to his backers.

The "long-shotites" carried over into the fourth race when Christine Adee won her first race in two years after a struggle over the 6½-furlong course. She easily disposed of By Surprise, a favorite, and Pukka Heaven. Those who invested in her chances received a $22.40 return.

Jockey Willie Obert, who confesses to be "over 40," did not let Rough Player out of a pull in winning the sixth race and salvaging some of the spoils for the short-shot players. Obert skimmed the rail throughout the mile and a sixteenth test. Rough Player paid $5.30.

Johnny Shanks rode his second winner when he won the seventh race with Mrs. V. Arthur's Pass. The winner won by two lengths. Fife finished second by a head from Bay Wrack. The winner paid $6.70, and negotiated the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:54 1-5.

Hagerstown, May 19.

Dear Al:

If you want to get a close up of a horse race there's no place like the infield of a half-mile track. It makes the race take on a personal touch that one can't get while sipping a cocktail on the lawn at Hialeah. You can see every move of the horses and jockeys. Speaking of jockeys, the boys here do a pretty fair job of risking their lives every day. They have to ride horses that are not used to the sharp turns and horses that have very doubtful legs. However, it is seldom that one sees a boy timid hereabouts. For the most part they are veterans who need the money. They earn every nickel they make and they are a happy lot in the bargain. There are no Derbies or Preaknesses for them but there's those three square meals. But the tough part about that is that most of them are threatened with the weight jinx and can't eat more than pigeon food. In addition to riding from one to seven races an afternoon, they have to work out the horses in the morning. I wonder what some of us will be riding when we're as old as Willie Obert.

BILL.

First race—Gemwick could get little at the big tracks, but this field is a different story. Gets in light and may take the chief end of the purse. Miss Adeline goes well on this course and is the one to beat. The Swagman likes a longer route, but is dangerous among these.

Second race—Anjoe is reported to be in fair form and ready to show a good effort in a cheap field. This looks like the right spot. Red Label shapes up as a contender. Miss Symphony earns her way on the half-milers and is a possibility.

Third race — Madame Walter, primed on the big tracks, seems well placed in this field. I understand that Palumbo will do the riding and I expect no mistakes. Scout Rose and Incendiary for the place and show.

Fourth race—Helen Bab likes this track and appears to be in a spot that calls for attention. Small Change has some good races in the books and is dangerous. Roquepine is better than rated and may be the surprise package.

Fifth race—Miss Epe was so much the best in her race opening day that she should have won by ten lengths. Appears to be over her head here, but I'm going to string along. Scudder is as good as those big track efforts. Timber Lady for the show. Prince Turley pulled up lame at Pimlico.

Sixth race—Wise Money needs only to run back to that last at Pimlico to defeat these. Looks like the best thing of the day. Soupcon and Mint Bud for the other awards.

Seventh race — Flageolet has worked well and is suited by the sharp turns. Bandersnatch and Porphyry to take care of the others.

Clocker Mikes selections at Hagerstown.
1—Sea Dove, Miss Adeline, Flaz Raising.
2—Marzee, Miss Patches, Red Label.
3—Incendiary, Scout Rose, Madame Walter.
4—Roquepine, Small Change, Heather Lassie.
5—Miss Epe, Scudder, Prince Turley.
6—Wise Money, Gay Lass, Cornwallis.
7—Siempre, Bandersnatch, Flageolet.
Best bet—Wise Money.

Quits Amateurs

GLENN MORRIS.

The Olympic decathlon champion forfeited his amateur standing yesterday by signing a contract to appear as Tarzan in the movies. Daniel J. Ferris, national secretary of the A. A. U., wrote Morris that his action forfeited his amateur status. (P. S.—Morris will make $25,000 in the next five years in the movies.)

Mrs. Moody Fails To Enter Tourney

Berkeley, Calif., May 19 (AP).—Recurrence of a back injury, which forced her to default a national singles' final match to Helen Jacobs in 1933, kept Mrs. Helen Wills Moody from returning to competitive tennis today.

The former tennis queen withdrew from the California State tennis championships where she was entered in mixed doubles.

"I think it's just a stiff muscle and shouldn't cause any trouble if I take care of it," said Mrs. Moody. "It did not result from playing tennis, but apparently from lifting something heavy."

Chevy Chase Nine Defeats Eastern

Bethesda-Chevy Chase nine yesterday handed Eastern's inter-high champions a 6-3 thumping at Garrett Park. Vic Vannais, Bethesda slab star, handcuffed the Lincoln Parkers with six safeties, while his mates found John Mead and Rip Carver for seven hits, Al Kidwell, shortstop of the Guyonmen, was the only Easterner to rap more than one safe blow, and Stockwell's double was the only extra-base hit.

Sandlot Pick-Ups

THE RESETTLEMENT GREENBELTS, leaders of the DEPARTMENTAL LEAGUE, are also setting the pace in the Baltimore Sunday semi-pro circuit . . . every Sabbath they play a double-header in the sister-city . . . Only beer kegs were lacking to make the game on the West Ellipse, Tuesday, a tribute to old Bacchus himself . . . the HEURICH BREWERS were playing OLD MILWAUKEE BEER . . . the winner was bound to get a beer toast . . . for REGGIE BROWN, Old Milwaukee pitcher, his 3-to-2 victory was doubly sweet . . . last year he pitched for Heurich's . . . Tuesday he held Heurich's to six hits, drove in the tying run in the eighth with a triple and then scored the winning run . . . Reggie bested BUCK LAWSON, the Leesburg importation, in a mound duel . . . Old Milwaukee gathered but four hits but rown's southpaw slants sent Old Milwaukee into second place in the INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE . . . five wins in five starts have given ACCOUNTS AND DEPOSITS a flying start in the SPORTS CENTER LEAGUE . . . one big reason for the strength of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK in the INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE is SAMMY HOOK, the shrewd catcher who forewent baseball last year to go to National Law School . . . Sammy became known as one of the city's" smartest receivers when playing for Sanitary Grocery and Murphy's Five and Ten, two and three years ago . . . With JOE GARVEY and ORLANDO BIRCH as his pitchers, judge the National Savings battery for yourself . . . a good share of this Savings team, which recently gave HEURICH'S its first beating of the season, formerly played with ST. MARY'S CELTICS across the river . . . GARVEY, REDS McMENIMIN, second baseman, and SHORTY GODFREY, third, are ex-CELTICS . . . CONNIE ROYER, another ace of the team's mound staff, is the former ROCKVILLE bedazzler . . . TILLY SCOTT, the ex-MOUNT RAINIER High celebrity, is another secret of Savings' success . . . the FORNEY who drove in Beggie Brown to beat Old Milwaukee, Tuesday, is not the JIM FORNEY who played for Western High and Baylor Freshmen in football . . . this FORNEY is a MARYLAND A. C. graduate . . . MANAGER JIM MURPHY, who spent a brief period with the Boston Red Sox, leads his PWA outfit against the GREENBELTS today for first place in the DEPARTMENTAL LEAGUE . . . and will do the pitching . . . deep mystery among sandlotters is what's become of JOE FRESCHI, last heard of with the 1936 BLUE FLAME VALETS, now as defunct as a last week's car pass.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGH PLAYER, $5.30, $4.30, $2.80; BUNGALOW, $5.00, $4.10; CORA KAY, $7.10.

ROUGH PLAYER shook off SEA FINN without effort to take command while under a strong grip, saved ground and was never out of hand. BUNGALOW, lacking early speed, moved up stoutly the second time around and closed willingly, but was no match for the winner. CORA KAY had speed in spots. HARD CHASE was through after a half. TROSTAR raced wide at the turns. SEA FINN stopped to a walk.

SEVENTH RACE—About 1 1/16 miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:36. Off at 5:37½. Winner, Mrs. V. PASS, off slightly, was steadied along while shaking off early bid of ARDOR, drew out to a good lead and finished well under a strong hand ride. PIPE worked her way up on the outside and was gaining gradually through the final quarter. BAY WRACK closed with good courage. ARDOR tired after running with PASS. The others had no excuses.

Wheat Prices 2 Cents Higher Despite Rains

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 19.—Despite showers in Kansas and Saskatchewan, wheat today scored 2 cents a bushel maximum new upturn, with most of the gain held at the last.

Price setbacks which at times more than offset wheat market advances were largely of a profit-taking character, and were quickly followed by rebounds upward. It was contended the moisture received today, whether in domestic or Canadian drought regions was too light to be of any important benefit for crops now retrograding fast throughout wide areas.

At the close, wheat was ⅞ to 1⅞ cents above yesterday's finish; May, 1.33¼@1.33⅜; July, 1.23⅛@1.23⅜; September, 1.21¼@1.21⅜. Corn, ⅞ off to 1¼ up; May, 1.33¾; July, 1.18⅜@1.18¾; September, 1.09⅛@1.09¼. Oats, ¼ to ⅞ down; May, 52@52¼; and rye showing 1¾ to 2½ cents bulge. May, 1.18¼. Provisions results were 10 to 22 cents higher.

F. W. Woolworth Co. To Increase Stores

Watertown, N. Y., May 19 (AP).—Foreseeing increased sales and profits, the F. W. Woolworth Co. feels justified in pursuing a store expansion program, E. C. Mauchly, vice president, told stockholders at an annual meeting today.

Besides enlarging and improving 163 existing sores last year the company opened 18 new units, he said. This brought stores in operation to 1,996. Woolworth has leased locations for 25 new stores to be opened in 1937, he disclosed.

Steel Activity Holds Despite Strike Threats

Pittsburgh Rate at 95%, Highest for Recovery Period.

New York, May 19.—Except for threats of strikes that might tie up some independent steel plants, the steel outlook is viewed more hopefully than was possible a few weeks ago, when new business volume began to decline, Iron Age said today in its weekly summary which adds:

"The drop in new business has not been precipitate, sales of most of the major producers having been around 75 per cent of shipments so far this month. In some products, notably plates for railroad equipment and pipe lines, new business of substantial amount has been placed, with considerable construction steel in early prospect. Thus, it now appears that a good portion of existing backlogs will be carried over into the third quarter, which will help to sustain operations at a high rate at least through July.

"Strike threats against three or four independent companies have appeared more realistic in view of the two-day shutdown last week at the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation plants in Pittsburgh and have caused some buyers to urge mills to hasten shipments, particularly sheets. No drastic action by the steel workers organizing committee is expected until after the result of the balloting on May 20 by employes of Jones & Laughlin is announced.

Capacity at 92 Per Cent.

"With the resumption of operations by Jones & Laughlin at the rate in effect previous to the strike, the industry is estimated to be producing ingots this week at 92 per cent of capacity. The Pittsburgh rate has jumped to 95 per cent, the highest of the recovery period, against a revised figure of 85 per cent for last week. The Wheeling district is operating at 99 per cent. The Chicago district continues at 86 per cent, but a large volume of new business there may force an early increase. There have been one point declines in the Ohio Valleys and at Cleveland, but elsewhere previous schedules are being pretty generally maintained.

"While the shutting down of any steel plants for more than a few days would tighten up the steel delivery situation, which has become quite a bit easier, the mere possibility of such strikes has tended to depress steel scrap prices still further, as many large consumers stay out of the market. However, a decline of $1 a ton at Pittsburgh is based on a good-sized sale to a mill. There have also been declines of $1 at Philadelphia and 50 cents at Chicago, reducing the Iron Age steel scrap composite to $17.92, or back to the low point of the year on January 4, last."

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Move Irregularly in Dull Trading; U. S. Bonds Lower; Wheat Strong.

New York, May 19.—Stock prices were irregular, with losses in small majority most of the time and with less active trading. Turnover was 789,460 shares. Government bonds again were easier. July wheat closed 1¾ cents higher at 123⅜ cents a bushel. Dollars moved against sterling and francs.

Stock prices were steady enough most of the day but the continued inactivity acted as a depressant on the professional mind. That hope of livelier markets a little later has not been abandoned is nevertheless indicated by the sale of a Stock Exchange membership at $96,000, unchanged from the last previous sale price. On the business side the mid-week statistics supported prices. Steel production, according to the Iron Age, continues high, and the recent slump in new business has been succeeded by an increase to a comparatively high rate. Railroad traffic last week apparently slipped a little, but the crop moving season is fast approaching. Production of electrical energy increased.

In spite of the activity and hardness in one or two railroad stocks, notably Northern Pacific, that section of the market was backward because of indications of a slight decline in car loadings last week and the early reports on April earnings showing inability to keep expenses down with rising gross revenues. Copper shares were strong for a while, possibly on talk of putting on the quota abroad, but the movement played out. At their best gains of a point or more were made by Anaconda, Kennecott, Smelters and others. Gold stocks did well. Homestake climbed about a dozen points by early afternoon.

Chain Stocks Weak.

Chain store stocks continued under pressure on the upholding of the Louisiana tax. Woolworth, Safeway and Penney dropped to a new low price. A. & P. on the Curb dipped five points. Farm implement stocks rose sharply on bullish surveys of sales this year compared with last and the excellent prospects outlined by corporation executives for the remainder of the year. Some interest also was taken in packing company stocks, on reports that pork and lard prices recently have risen sharply.

Oil, rail equipment, chemical, department store, and food shares were little changed. Utilities receded by fractions. Steels were a bit heavy, but United States Steel was fairly steady. Union Pacific and Santa Fe gave up a point or two. Detroit & Mackinac common and preferred and Chicago, Indiana & Louisville preferred continued active at the odd-lot post. In the past two weeks D. & M. has nearly doubled in value and Monon has risen 50 per cent.

Gold Scare Subsides.

Along with the announcement of another large purchase of gold by the Bank of England, presumably from the British Equalization Fund, the market in gold shares in the London trading turned buoyant. It has taken some time for the gold "scare" to subside, and it has not yet disappeared; but the markets are now showing much less fear of any substantial cut in the dollar price for gold or in the gold content of the dollar.

The rumor of a reduction, which brought a collapse, in the market for commodities, gold shares and to the stock market generally, at least served to show the dangers in a change of policy on gold by the American authorities. It was dangerous in the first place to put up the price of gold, but once done, the action is difficult to reverse without serious consequences to business throughout the world.

No doubt the British government, commonly supposed to have agreed with our Treasury to a nominal cut in the price—perhaps as a warning, in order to retard the flow of gold here—has had its ears ringing with protests from the gold producting parts of the empire. General Smuts of South Africa considered the matter important enough to go to London to state his side of the case, and recently only determined denials of any intention to cut gold have come from the authorities.

It is nevertheless in the bounds of possibility that some time this country, to head off inflation, might wish to backtrack on gold, but merely to cut the buying price and at the same time continue to purchase would not stop gold from coming here. We would still be the principal purchaser, the price still would be profitable to producers and adjustment of exchange rates would still give arbitrageurs a profit in buying gold in London for sale to the Treasurer.

Market Pegging.

Undoubtedly the purchase of gold by the Bank of England serves the double purpose of keeping the money market easy, thereby facilitating Treasury borrowing, and keeping the bank's reserve abreast of growing note circulation. The bank gives up notes to the equalization fund for gold, the fund creates bank deposits with the notes and the banks buy Government securities with the deposits.

The mechanics are similar to an open market operatoin by the central bank, except that gold is the article dealt in rather than government securities. The bank today bought nearly £2,600,000 more gold, on the heels of a purchase of nearly £ 5,000,000 last week. These are pounds expressel in terms of old gold parities. The purchase today lifted the bank's reserve to another new high record. Stated in dollars—in terms of present gold parities the Bank of England's purchases in the past two weeks total more than $60,000,000.

Government Financing.

The Government bond market will be much surprised if the Federal Reserve banks bought any Treasury securities on balance in the week ended today. The Federal Reserve banks are supposed to have had about $13,000,000 of maturing bills and these probably have been replaced.

The Government securities market has had its unsettled moments, but has not threatened to become disorderly, which is the password for the opening of Federal Reserve support bids. The market took at face value the explanation that the meeting of members of the Open Market Committee in Washington yesterday and today was purely for the discussion of June Treasury financing. Some observers are lifting from $500,000,000 to $750,000,000 their estimates of June new money needs.

Stock Removal.

The Stock Exchange seeks to remove from the trading list the $7 and $8 preferred issues of General Gas & Electric because too little of the stocks is outstanding. It could go ahead and remove a lot of other sparsely inhabited stocks, and by the way, the Curb Exchange hasn't much excuse for retaining on its list the New York Steam common shares, only a few of which are outside the ownership of Consolidated Edison.

Hogs $12 Per Cwt., 8-Year Spring Top

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 19.—A record-breaking upturn in hog prices in the last 10 days that has restored the $12 per hundredweight top and lifted the market to its highest spring level in eight years may not yet have fully reflected unusual conditions in the trade, livestock experts said today.

The sharpest hog market upturn since January, 1936, when the Supreme Court invalidated the AAA processing taxes, including the $2.25 per hundredweight tax on hogs, occurred today. Hogs skyrocketetd 35 to 50 cents, and the $12 top returned for the first time since early last August.

Major Nations Report Gains By Industries

Slight Recession in March Occurs in the Netherlands.

New York, May 19.—World industrial production continued to advance during March, according to the monthly review of foreign economic conditions issued today by the National Industrial Conference Board.

The volume of output in March, on a seasonally adjusted basis, was higher in Great Britain, Germany, France, Belgium, Poland, Austria, Hungary, the Scandinavian countries, Japan, Australia, Canada, the United States and in most of the Central and South American countries. A slight recession occurred in the Netherlands.

In Great Britain, according to the conference board's survey, the increase in armament contracts has exerted pressure on manufacturers. At the same time, lack of skilled labor, capacity and raw materials, especially in the iron and steel industry, necessary to fill these orders continues to have a retarding influence on industrial expansion. Business activity as a whole, however, rose to a record high level in March. Many branches of the consumers' goods industries, including the textile, footwear, automobile and electrical equipment industries, were able to increase their output materially.

Reports from France indicate that some further improvement occurred in industrial output during March, due to gains in industries that have benefited primarily from the armament program. These industries, however, are now somewhat hampered by a scarcity of raw materials. Consumers' goods industries in France are currently reducing their activities because of their heavy accumulation of stocks of goods.

Although current figures are not available for Italy, it is reported that activity in most industries is at a relatively high level.

Larger Sales and Federal Benefit Payments Swell Total.

New York, May 19.—In addition to larger receipts from marketings this year, the farmers have received a substantial increase in benefit payments from the Government, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Benefit payments in March amounted to $111,000,000 this year as against $15,000,000 last year. For the first quarter, these payments totaled $206,000,000 as compared with only $16,000,000 a year ago.

Benefit payments raised the farmers' total income in March to $707,000,000. This represented an increase of 36.0 per cent over the $520,000,000 received in the same month last year. Total farm cash income, including benefit payments, in the first quarter amounted to $1,945,000,000 as against $1,520,000,000 a year ago, an increase of 28.0 per cent.

If the increase in total farm income over a year ago which occurred in March should be maintained during the remainder of 1937, the annual farm income this year would amount to $10,574,000,000 as compared with $7,865,000,000 last year and with $4,328,000,000 at the low for the depression in 1932. It would exceed the income of $10,479,000,000 in 1929.

On the Air Today

The tenth anniversary of the flight of Charles Augustus Lindbergh is forming an important part of the broadcast menu for today, with two programs scheduled by National Broadcasting Co. and one by Mutual.

Midday, both WOL and WRC will broadcast the luncheon of the Lotos Club, at which surviving members of the "Original Lindbergh Gang" will be present. The "gang" is composed of those who played parts in the Flying Colonel's epochal achievement. They include public officials, backers of the flight, bodyguards and officers, personal advisers and others.

Several will be heard: Maj. William B. Robertson, director of the air line for which Lindbergh flew mail from Chicago to St. Louis and one of the flight backers; Edward P. Mulrooney, then police commissioner of New York City; former Mayor James J. Walker, Charles L. Lawrence, inventor of Lindbergh's engine; Dr. James H. Kimball, of the United States Weather Bureau, who made up Lindbergh's weather charts; Detective Sergts. James Finn, Frank Raihl and Charles McGowan, assigned to guard the flier, and Richard B. Blythe and Harry A. Bruno, personal advisers.

One of the principal speakers will be Raymond Orteig, donor of the $25,000 prize for the New York-Paris flight in 1927.

At 3 p. m., WMAL provides the exchange of greetings of Mayor LaGuardia and Raymond Laurent, representatives of the two cities between which Lindbergh made his flight. Mayor LaGuardia speaks from Los Angeles, however. Laurent will be in Paris. Songs of ten years ago will be played by an N. B. C. orchestra.

Other features today:

"Do You Remember"—another organ program by Pearl Hauer, WMAL, at 9:45 a. m.

From Copenhagen—Radio Orchestra in an hour's concert, one of a series of European concerts arranged by the International Broadcasting Union, WMAL, at 2.

Commemoration—Bicentenary of death of Stradivari, violin craftsmen, by short wave from Cremona, Italy, WMAL, at 3:30. Soloists and orchestra.

Ridin' High—Ray Sinatra and his orchestra, with Morton Bowe, the Norsemen, and other guests, WMAL, at 6:15.

Ethel Merman—Heads guests in "Vallee Varieties," WRC, at 7. Also Maurice Evans, Walter O'Keefe, Juan Hernandez and Jaunita Hall Chorus in feature called "Voodoo."

Kate Smith—Presents Pauline Frederick and Phillip Holmes in scenes from "Amber," WJSV, at 7. With Henny Youngman.

"Show Boat"—With Elaine Arden, comedian; Lynn Martin and the Merry Macs, WRC, at 8. Also Nadine Conner and Thomas Thomas.

Bing Crosby—Presents Lee Tracy, Lionel Stander and William Gargen, all of the films, WRC, at 9. Also Connie Boswell.

Rudy Vallee, who has interviewed numerous persons in his variety show, is himself to be interviewed tonight. Maurice Evans, the distinguished actor who is also a guest star in the show, will inquire into Vallee's reactions to the coronation. Vallee arrives in New York only this morning.

The National Broadcasting Co. introduces a new sustaining program for summer listeners tonight, the "Night Club," starring Morey Amsterdam as master of ceremonies. The last variety show Amsterdam attempted didn't do so well and I personally wish him luck with this one. His forte is much the same type of thing that has popularized Al Pearce and he deserves a good break. The show will be staged in N. B. C.'s Studio A in Chicago. Fifty couples each week will be permitted to have tables in the studio and dance on a special floor when the orchestra plays. Talent for the first show: Gale Page, Clark Dennis, Betty and the Escorts and Amsterdam himself.

Samuel F. Cooke, Postal Veteran, To Retire Today

Samuel F. Cooke, 80, postmaster at Townshend, Md., for half a century, will return today from the service because of ill health, it was learned yesterday. Cooke is the oldest postmaster in Maryland in years and the second oldest in point of service.

Born in Washington, Cooke moved to Maryland as a young man. He was appointed postmaster March 12, 1887. Since the death of his wife 11 years ago he has lived alone in the old family homestead.

The aged postmaster recalled recently that as a young man he went to Bryantown in Charles County and was treated for a minor ailment by Dr. Samuel Mudd, the physician who set John Wilkes Booth's broken leg as he fled from Washington after fatally wounding President Lincoln at Ford's Theater.

Immaculata Holds Its May Day Fete

Miss Shirley Pfeiffer, of Montclair, N. J., was May Queen at the May Day celebration of Immaculata Junior College and Seminary Sunday. Her attendants as maids of honor were Miss Marianna Grogan, of this city; Miss Betty McKenna, of Antigo, Wis.; Miss Agnes Lynch, of Westminster, Md., and Miss Julia Quinones, of San German, Puerto Rico, with Miss Marie O'Connor and Miss Marie Trujado as trainbearers.

In the pageant, "Joyful Moments in the Life of the Queen of Heaven," Miss Patricia Lennon took the part of Christ, Miss Anais Harding played the part of the Blessed Virgin, Miss Patsy Slattery, the Angel Gabriel; Miss Mary Francis O'Connor, St. Joseph; Catherine Geegler, Marie Murphy and Alice McLeod, angels, and Ann Stohlman, the Spirit of the Immaculate.

The ceremonies took place on the spacious grounds of the school, with the Rev. Father Dominic O. C. F. officiating, assisted by the Rev. Maurice F. King and the Rev. Russell Phelan, of St. Ann's Church.

Duranty Will Address Press Club Luncheon

Walter Duranty, for more than ten years the Moscow correspondent of the New York Times, will speak at a luncheon at the National Press Club today noon.

Duranty was awarded a Pulitzer prize in 1932 for his Moscow correspondence.

Duke to Fight Clique of Foes In British Court

King's Free Will Throttled, Edward Thinks; Wallis to Be 'Royal Highness.'

Princess Elizabeth, the heiress presumptive, and Princess Margaret Rose, Princess Royal Mary and the Duchesses of Gloucester and Kent.

Rogers disclosed that Edward, with a marriage contract signed and almost all details of the wedding ceremony cleaned up, is planning a secret honeymoon of three weeks where the eyes of the world will not be upon them.

[A mysterious woman, purportedly a Hungarian countess, reappeared tonight to plague the Duke of Windsor as he made final preparations for his marriage, the United Press reported. The woman, who has pursued the duke for three years and has written him hundreds of imploring letters, arrived at Cannes on the French Riviera, determined to "waylay" him when he passes through there with his bride on his honeymoon.—Editor's note.]

Other sources said the duke was seeking another chateau in northern France hidden enough so that he could entertain privately members of the royal family and let them become acquainted with the new "royal highness."

If he is unable to find such a place, it was said the duke and his bride might go to the Rogers villa at Cannes and then embark on a yacht for an Adriatic cruise, such as they enjoyed together late last summer. On that cruise Edward discovered "a lovely, well-hidden" island off the Dalmatian coast.

After their "secret" honeymoon, the couple will go to Wasser-Leonburg Castle on Austria's southern frontier, which Edward has leased for three months, beginning July 1.

Despite the duke's disagreements with the Archbishop of Canterbury during the abdication crisis, Rogers declared, the marriage "would, of course, be in accordance with Anglican Church canons."

He said he didn't think a marriage contract signed under English law between the duke and Mrs. Warfield contained any special marriage settlement, but it was designed to "prevent any future conflict between French and English law."

Title Is Hereditary.

"This means that if they have children the succession will operate under English law," he said.

Edward renounced all rights of succession to the British throne for himself and his descendants at the time of his abdication, but his newly created title of Duke of Windsor would be handed down to his eldest son.

State's Attorney Maurice Carcassonne, of Tours, today granted permission to waive the law requiring 15-day publication of banns and authorized the private chaeau ceremony.

Immediately wedding invitations were dispatched to some 30 friends of the duke and Mrs. Warfield, but the guest list was kept secret until replies are received.

Wallis' Title Baffles Britain.

London, May 19 (AP).—Word from Monts that Mrs. Wallis Warfield would become "her royal highness" on her marriage June 3 to Britain's ex-King was received here tonight with mixed foreboding and bewilderment in social circles.

One peer commented cryptically: "Personally, I'm in favor of her—but it is going to cause a social revolution around here if they ever return to London to live."

A typical comment was: "It would have been better all around if she were content merely to be called 'your highness' and let it go at that."

Another reaction heard was:

"It's going to be slightly awkward if and whn they ever return to England. I would like to be present the first time the Duckess of Norfolk (wife of the premier duke and earl) is required to call her 'your royal highness.'"

New Site Approved For Naval Hospital

The House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday indicated it would recommend a new site for an expanded Naval Hospital and Medical Center, after a tour of inspection Tuesday.

The committee, which is holding hearings on a bill authorizing a new Naval Hospital, will meet later in the week to decide what recommendation it will make.

Rear Admiral Perceval S. Rossiter, surgeon general of the Navy, directed the committee on its tour yesterday.

Swanson Given Anchor Of Poppies by Veterans

The Veterans of Foreign Wars yesterday presented Navy Secretary Claude A. Swanson with an anchor of poppies, as a tribute to officers and men in the Navy and Marine Corps who have lost their lives in Naval service. The presentation was made by S. R. Fuller, National councilman of the V. F. W.

In accordance with tradition, Secretary Swanson gave the anchor to H. J. Hines, captain of the Peary Ship Post and it will be used in ceremonies on Memorial Day at Annapolis conducted by the Peary Ship Post.

Huff Accepts Appointment As Penal Head

Succeeds Captain Barnard; Will Assume Duties About June 1.

The post of general superintendent of District penal institutions, vacant since Capt. M. M. Barnard ended his service April 30, was filled yesterday when Ray L. Huff, Federal parole supervisor, accepted an appointment made by the Commissioners more than two weeks ago.

Huff was sworn in at the Board of Public Welfare. He will begin his new work about June 1.

The Federal parole supervisor accepted the position after action by the Civil Service Commission had raised the salary for the job from a $5,600 minimum to $6,500 minimum. As reallocated, the salary grade runs as high as $7,500 annually.

Elwood Street, public welfare director, pointed out that the local penal director has more prisoners under his charge than any Federal prison head.

Huff, in his letter of acceptance, said:

"In this appointment I believe that much weight must be given in recognition of the prison policies of Congress and of the Attorney General, as they are expressed in the practices of the Bureau of Prisons, with which I have been associated. These direct a strictly merit policy to make prisons serve the community in as wide an area as is consistent with their primary purposes of custody and rehabilitation."
